

British Officials Take Grave View of Attacks By Japs on Two Ships

Destruction of Steamers Is Claimed Deliberate, but Japanese Declare Bombing a Mistake

Shanghai, Aug. 7 (AP)—British officials circles tonight took an increasingly grave view of two Japanese air raids on British property near Ichang as more detailed reports came from the British gunboat Gannet which passed unscathed through the Sunday attack.

Commander A. F. St. G. Orpen of the Gannet sent word that the gunboat herself narrowly escaped destruction from one bomb which he asserted seemed to be aimed at the British vessel and landed only 100 yards away.

Two British Yangtze river steamers were destroyed in the raids which killed four Chinese and injured a Canadian, H. J. Denyer, and four Chinese near Ichang, more than 1,000 miles up the Yangtze from Shanghai.

Mistake, Japanese Say
"We have no information," said a Japanese army spokesman. "If it happened, it is a regrettable mistake."

All of the damaged property was destroyed by the British to have been marked plainly with British emblems.

Britons charged the attack on British property, which also damaged the Asiatic Petroleum Company's works, was premeditated.

Orpen reported to rear Admiral Reginald Vesley Holt, commander of British Yangtze river patrol, that the Gannet was a half mile from the petroleum company property while it was being bombed. The Japanese plane then detached itself from the attackers and flew over the gunboat, releasing a single bomb which passed over the Gannet. The missile and fire which followed destroyed the two river steamers.

British Launch Protest
Britain yesterday lodged a protest with Japanese against the attack on British property, but no action has been taken in the light of further official reports from Commander Orpen.

Foreign missionaries reported to Chung-King that casualties probably would total more than 500 in Ichang as a result of Japanese air raids carried out at the same time British property a short distance downstream was damaged.

Meanwhile, the Japanese army spokesman said announcement would be made "shortly" of the creation of a "unified government of China" to consolidate the pro-Japanese governments set up in Peiping and Nanking by the Japanese to govern conquered Chinese territory.

Japanese naval authorities, continuing their drive to blockade the China coast, notified foreign consuls that the port of Haimen in Chekiang province, 250 miles south of Shanghai, would be closed tomorrow morning.

Ride in a Tank If You Want a Thrill

Army's Newest Battle-wagons Attract Much Attention

By RICE YAHNER

Manassas, Va., Aug. 7 (AP)—To feel as you can lick the world, ride in a tank.

But when you get out you'll feel that all the world licked you. If they could devise some widespread commercial use for these battle-wagons—the army's newest mile-an-hour land attack weapons—their jockeys would vie with aviators for the "ohs" and "ahs" of the public.

The sensation to the tyro inside was 18,000-pound, armored tanks may be compared with confinement in a submarine, plus the use of a boiler factory.

About two years ago, these tanks are among the army's most closely guarded secrets. Now for the first time they are on parade at first maneuvers here and at Plattsburgh, N. Y., the next two weeks.

On this civil war battleground, 70 tanks will be the principal attack force of a streamlined regular division testing whether it is superior or vulnerable to the 28th (Maryland) and 29th (Pennsylvania) divisions' larger force of infantry, artillery and special troops, reinforced by only four tanks.

A 250-horsepower, seven-cylinder, diesel, air-cooled airplane motor furnishes the motive power and the driver, with five forward gears at his command, and the radio operator-gunner sit in the rear cockpit. Two gunners occupy turrets that can swing in a circle. The armament includes 50-caliber and 30-caliber machine guns.

Leche and Weiss Are Indicted in Louisiana Scandal

Former Governor Accused of $67,000 Illegal Profits

New Orleans, Aug. 7 (AP)—Reaching high among the political heirs of the late Huey P. Long, the federal government today indicted former Governor Richard Leche on a charge he profited by $67,000 through illegal "hot oil" operations.

Named with Leche and accused of making an identical sum through evasion of oil production regulations was Seymour Weiss, New Orleans hotel owner and one-time financial right hand man to the slain "Kingfish." Freeman Burford, wealthy Dallas, Tex. oil man and the East Texas Refining Company also were indicted in this transaction.

Weiss Again Indicted
A second indictment announced today by the federal grand jury charged Weiss with income tax evasion and still another made a similar charge against the dapper hotel man and Louis C. Lesage, former Standard Oil Company official here. This same jury indicted these men on mail fraud charges a few weeks ago.

The strapping Leche, just six weeks out of the governor's chair, appeared at the federal building soon after the indictments and was fingerprinted before being released on $5,000 bond. He declined comment on the case, as did Weiss, who made bond of $15,000. They face possible imprisonment for two years on each of the two oil counts.

The name of New Orleans' mayor, Robert S. Maestri—who emerged with Leche and Weiss as the rulers of the Long domain after the senator was shot to death in 1935—appeared repeatedly in the oil indictment but he was accused of nothing.

Alleged Deal in 1936
In 1936 when the alleged illegal production occurred, Maestri was commissioner of conservation and as such authorized the order whereby output of certain wells was stepped up, but the indictment said he was fraudulently misled by the conspirators and no charge on implication was made against him.

The story related by the indictment follows:
In March, 1936, Governor-Elect Leche met with Weiss, Burford and others here to plan a deal whereby production of thirteen oil wells in the Rodessa field near Shreveport would be stepped up from approximately 5,000 barrels daily to 20,000 barrels daily for several months, and this contraband oil run over into Texas, in violation of the Connally act which prohibits interstate movement of illegally produced "hot" oil.

Burford built a 59-mile pipeline to Longview, Tex., and approximately 480,000 barrels of oil was moved before a federal court in east Texas issued a restraining order.

Paid Large Sums
Burford paid Weiss $48,592.66, representing 10 cents per barrel on this oil, and subsequently paid over $100,000 to Weiss as a commission after the pipeline had been sold for $950,000.

Weiss paid Leche $7,000 bills here in November, 1936, "as his share of the illicit gains and profits of the said conspiracy" and kept a like sum.

Leche was smiling but non-committal as he appeared at the federal building. He leaned heavily on a cane which he has used since stricken with arthritis in January. He gave ill health as the reason for resigning.

Governor Earl K. Long, who succeeded Leche just as the present political scandals began breaking in late June, declined to comment in Baton Rouge.

U. S. Attorney General Frank Murphy together with FBI director, J. Edgar Hoover were Leche's guests at a reception at the governor's mansion only two months ago when Murphy stopped in Baton Rouge to deliver the commencement address at Louisiana State University and accept an honorary degree bestowed by Dr. James Monroe Smith, who now has been indicted on forty state and federal counts.

Hitler, Mussolini Get Little Help From New Spain

Franco's Victory Turns Out To Be Relatively Unimportant

By ANDRUE BERDING

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—Officials with their eyes glued to the Latin American scene have reached the conclusion that General Franco's triumph in Spain has not given Hitler and Mussolini much added advantage south of the Rio Grande.

Last year many persons here thought and said that a Franco victory would be the spearhead for more German and Italian penetration of Latin America, that Franco would be used as the funnel for pouring in German and Italian propaganda, political and commercial, that the United States would be seriously challenged in Latin America by the formation of an Ibero-German-Italian combination.

It has not panned out that way—at least not so far, and nearly six months have passed since Franco became master of all Spain.

Expansion Plans Fail
Despatches to the state department from Latin American capitals recount at formation of Spanish phalanxes on the lines of those in Spain, but it is reported that the attempts are not meeting with great success.

There have been statements on both sides of the Atlantic that Spain, with the assistance of Germany and Italy, would seek to regain her old empire, trying for the return of Cuba, Puerto Rico and whatnot. But the only reaction in responsible circles here, and apparently in Latin America too, has been a broad grin.

Many Ignore Spain
Many analysts say that the majority of Latin Americans of Spanish stock have proved unaffected by what happens in Spain. They acknowledge certain cultural affinities, but, having been separated from the motherland now for nearly five generations, they refuse to be influenced in their own lives by what occurs in Spain any more than Americans of English stock would be if the British government underwent a change.

Cackling Chickens Betray Convicts

Kankakee, Ill., Aug. 7 (AP)—Two escaped federal convicts, betrayed by the cackling of four chickens, were captured today on the tip of an alert policeman who also noticed that their automobile license plates did not match.

The convicts were Gerald Montague, 21, of Kankakee, and Walter Smith, 22, of Cincinnati. They were among seven federal prisoners who escaped from guards July 26, near Thornburg, Va., while they were being transported by bus from the Atlanta, Ga., penitentiary to the federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa.

Both Montague and Smith were questioned for hours today about the attempted seizure of a $56,000 army payroll aboard an Illinois Central train, south of here, last Monday. The prisoners were taken to the federal penitentiary at Danville to be held until they could be located. Postal inspectors declined to say whether the men were implicated in the robbery.

Deputy Sheriff Gene La Fontaine said the pair had confessed five burglaries, the theft of a car and the theft of four chickens. The cackling of the chickens on their ear set of the men's car attracted the attention of a night policeman.

Danzig Nazis To Withdraw Ban on Pole Inspectors

Poland Scores Point in Dispute over Customs Regulations

(By The Associated Press)
Poland scored herself a point over Danzig Nazis last (Monday) night in an official announcement saying the Free City Senate had agreed to withdraw restrictions placed on Polish customs inspectors last week.

The dispute, mounting since last Friday, found Poland firm. Her mod was pointed up yesterday at a huge patriotic rally where her military commander insisted she would fight if necessary to keep her rights in Nazi-dominated Danzig.

Poland was given control of Free City customs after the World War, and last night's communique said "customs control will be integrally maintained in Danzig."

Senate Less Belligerent
The Senate's note was said to have given assurance of no intention to present Poland with a sudden stroke abolishing the customs control, and included an agreement to enter negotiations on the troublesome question.

A Munich dispatch said Albert Forster, Danzig Nazi leader, flew to Salzburg, near Adolf Hitler's Berchtesgaden estate and although Berlin sources disclaimed knowledge of the visit Danzig quarters said he had gone to consult the Fuehrer.

Political informants said they saw Berlin's guiding hand in the Senate action while Poles interpreted it as a victory for the firm attitude attributed to Warsaw in the Polish-Danzig "Margarine and Herring War."

Charges by Danzig Germans

The dispute revolves around the allegation of Danzig Germans that Poland increased the number of customs supervisors unnecessarily in Danzig. The Polish action in banning export of margarine and curtailment of herring shipments to Poland, a big user of these two important Danzig products also figured largely in the Polish-Danzig differences. The Germans charged some of the supervisors were engaged in espionage.

The seriousness of the situation was intensified by the long campaign by Nazis for return of Danzig to her pre-war status as a part of German territory.

Danzig was made a Free City after the World War under League of Nations protection. The customs regulations of Danzig, a valuable port to Poland, were established by treaty in 1920, putting them under Polish law but providing for administration within Danzig territory of Danzig officials. Poland is permitted under the treaty to inspect Danzig customs with no limit on the personnel for this work.

Polish customs officials halted the export of margarine to Poland last week, declaring her customs control rights had been violated because Danzig manufacturers had refused to permit inspection of their plants.

Ballot Supersedes Strike in Detroit

Detroit, Aug. 7 (AP)—The ballot superseded the strike today as the instrument for settling labor disputes in the automobile industry.

While idle cogs in the giant General Motors machine began turning again with the end to the CIO's skilled workers strike, the projected auto plant employee elections by the Labor Board commanded the scene.

The AFL-United Auto Workers formally consented to an employee poll in the Packard Motor Car Co., which had been petitioned by the rival CIO-United Auto Workers, and then on its own asked for a similar poll among employees of General Motors plants throughout the country.

The move came as a surprise inasmuch as the UAW-AFL had earlier indicated opposition to such polls, contending the dispute between the two unions should be settled by circuit court litigation, now pending.

In the announcement that a poll would be asked in G. M. plants the UAW-AFL accused the UAW-CIO of making a "bunk settlement" in ending the strike of tool and die makers in 12 General Motors plants last Saturday.

Roosevelt Says His Court Program Has Now Been Attained

Text of President's Statement on Court Reorganization Proposals

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's statement today on his court reorganization proposals:

It is worth recording that today, August 7, 1939, deserves special recognition because it marks the final objective of the comprehensive proposal for judicial reorganization which I made to the Congress on February 5, 1937. The country is naturally concerned with the attainment of proper objectives rather than any one of many possible methods proposed for the accomplishment of the end.

1. Two and one-half years ago I proposed the extension to the justices of the supreme court of retirement privileges then available to other federal judges. Such an act was passed March 1, 1937.

2. I called attention to the unwarranted attitude of the Supreme Court with reference to its exercise of constitutional powers. Measures of social and economic reform were being impeded or defeated by narrow interpretations of the constitution, and by the assumption on the part of the Supreme Court of legislative powers which properly belonged to the Congress. It is true that the precise method, which I recommended, was not adopted, but the objective, as every person in the United States knows today, was achieved. The results are not even open to dispute. Attacks recently made on the Supreme Court itself by ultra-conservative members of the bar indicate how fully our liberal ideas have already prevailed.

3. I called attention to the congested dockets of the federal courts, delay in disposing of cases, the need of new blood in the judiciary branch of the government, and the need of additional judges. Since then twenty-five additional judges have been provided for by the Congress, and a bill authorizing five more awaits my signature. The congested dockets and the delay have been already almost eliminated.

4. I called attention to the need for greater flexibility in the judicial system so that judges could be more readily assigned to areas where the courts were excessively in arrears. Under the act of August 24, 1937, a welcome improvement was made in this feature of our judicial system.

5. I called attention to the intolerable situation when constitutional questions involving federal statutes were passed on in private litigation, and recommended that no decision, injunction or decree on constitutional grounds should be permitted without previous notice to the attorney general and an opportunity for the United States to be heard. By the act of August 24, 1937, the attorney general was given the right to intervene in litigation between private parties involving constitutionality of federal statutes, and limitations were placed on the issuance of injunctions in similar cases in the lower court.

6. I called attention to the need for direct and immediate appeal to the Supreme Court in cases involving constitutionality of federal statutes, such cases to take precedence over all other matters pending in the court. This right of direct appeal was established by the act of August 24, 1937 and is now the law of the land.

7. I called attention to the need of the judiciary itself for effective machinery for overseeing its own dockets and expediting its own affairs. This very day I have, with great satisfaction, approved an act which sets up an administrative office for the judiciary.

Thus have been enacted into law six of the actual recommendations made by me more than two years ago—and the seventh recommendation has been accomplished through the opinions of the Supreme Court itself.

John Young Brown Loses Gubernatorial Race To Keen Johnson
Louisville, Ky., Aug. 7 (AP)—Lieut. Gov. Keen Johnson, supported by Gov. A. B. "Happy" Chandler's political organization, took a lead of more than 20,000 over former U. S. Representative John Young Brown today in tabulation of votes cast Saturday in the Democratic gubernatorial primary.

The vote in 1,732 of 4,307 precincts:
Johnson, 123,314.
Brown, 102,785.

The lieutenant governor's lead was piled up "out in the state." Only 11 of 606 precincts had been tabulated in Jefferson county (Louisville), where Johnson was supported by the city administration.

Johnson, Richmond publisher, pitched his campaign principally on an attack on the Congress of Industrial Organizations, for whose United Mine Workers Brown is an attorney. Johnson called the CIO "Communist" and said John L. (Continued on Page Two)

President Says His Program Is in Effect, but under Different Methods than He Requested

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—President Roosevelt pronounced the objectives of his defeated 1937 court reorganization bill fully attained tonight.

He said attacks made recently on the Supreme Court by "ultra-conservative members of the bar" indicated how fully the administration's "liberal ideas" had prevailed, even though his proposal to recognize the tribunal had not been the method by which this was accomplished.

Mr. Roosevelt named no names, but newsmen recalled that Frank J. Hogan, President of the American Bar Association, had declared not long ago that recent judicial construction had brought most if not all activities of the nation "within the orbit of Federal control."

"Recent far-reaching decisions (of the high court) compel the conclusion," Hogan told a bar association meeting in San Francisco recently, "that the American people must look to the legislature rather than the judiciary for the preservation of the liberties of the people."

Issues Formal Statement

Mr. Roosevelt spoke tonight in a formal statement issued in connection with the signing of a bill creating an administrative office to handle the fiscal affairs of all Federal courts and to keep tab on the condition of their dockets.

In his 1937 message to Congress on the judiciary, he urged creation of a court "proctor" to perform the latter function and also advanced the Supreme Court reorganization plan which set off one of the greatest political struggles since the Civil War.

Marks Final Objective

"It is worth recording" Mr. Roosevelt said, "that today, August 7, 1939, deserves special recognition because it marks the final objective of the comprehensive proposals for judicial reorganization which I made to the Congress on February 5, 1937."

"The country is naturally concerned with the attainment of proper objectives rather than any one of the many possible methods proposed for the accomplishment of the end."

Lists Seven Objectives

Then the President listed his seven objectives of 1937, all of which he said had been reached.

As to Supreme Court itself, he asserted:
"I called attention to the unwarranted attitude of the Supreme Court with reference to its exercise of constitutional powers. Measures of social and economic reform were being impeded or defeated by narrow interpretations of the constitution, and by the assumption on the part of the Supreme Court of legislative powers which properly belong to the Congress."

Boy Cuts Off Leg Crushed by Train

William Capps Then Makes Crutch and Walks Down Tracks

Lorain, O., Aug. 7 (AP)—St. Joseph's hospital attaches described tonight how a 19-year-old boy, his foot crushed when he fell from a freight train, amputated his own foot and after eight hours made his way to safety with an improvised crutch.

The story was given them by William Capps, Somerset, Ky., high school student, who was reported in "good condition" after doctors again operated on his leg.

Capps told hospital authorities his foot was crushed last night when he fell from a train near Vermillion, O.

He said he used a penknife to cut off the injured foot near his ankle, stopped the flow of blood with a tourniquet fashioned from his clothes, fashioned a crutch from tree branches and made his way nearly three-quarters of a mile along the track before being picked up about 8 a. m. by another train crew.

Doctors said Capps was nearly exhausted when brought to the hospital, but rallied after medical attention. In the hospital operation surgeons cut off the leg to just below the knee.

Escaped Elephant Enticed To Give Up in Virginia

Two Fellow Pachyderms Help in Capture of Two-Ton Elsie

Staunton, Va., Aug. 7 (AP)—Two-ton Elsie, fugitive circus elephant, was lured back into captivity today after a safari of 200 police and country folk had stalked her through the foothills of the Blue Ridge mountains for a day and a half.

Elsie, footsore and hungry, had plodded through the forests south of here for 33½ hours since escaping from a wrecked circus trailer. She walked quietly from the woods with two fellow pachyderms by her side. They had been freed to entice her from her hideout.

Loaded into Trailer
Fright engendered by the wreck that killed a circus attendant and another elephant was gone when the fugitive found her mates, and she quickly was loaded on to another trailer and started on the way to Roanoke, Va., where the circus is showing.

The two elephants whose presence induced Elsie to surrender had been chained in the vicinity, a half mile north of Mint Spring and a short distance west of Route 11, since early morning, but when this failed to attract Elsie trainers decided to liberate them for the decisive attempt.

She came back just like any good circus elephant, ready to eat her peanuts.

Sighted from Plane
But it was an exciting night and day while it lasted. After the elephant had hidden away yesterday and last night, trampled fences and possibilities of greater damage aroused authorities to new methods today. An airplane was brought into service and Elsie soon was spotted not far from where the tractor-drawn trailer, from which she escaped, had gone into a ditch.

The hunters picked up the trail and followed her four or five miles across country. They didn't get too close, however, because Elsie turned upon three of her more daring pursuers and chased them up a tree.

From then on it was a waiting game until the fugitive decided the jig was up.

Federal and New York Officials Speed Up Drive To Capture Lepke

New York, Aug. 7 (AP)—Federal and city authorities took three long strides today in the campaign of the public versus Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, the fugitive industrial racketeer accused by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey of conducting a stealthy and deadly war against his erstwhile gangster associates.

The government, acting under the authority of Attorney General Murphy, convened an extraordinary grand jury to collect and integrate information in a national attack on crime in which Lepke's capture figured as one specific objective in broad offensive.

The police sent out an 8-state alarm for Isidore Zennreich, a 200-pound, swarthy accused Lepke associate, coincident with Dewey's disclosure that "Izzy" and four others had been indicted with Lepke and

The convicts were Gerald Montague, 21, of Kankakee, and Walter Smith, 22, of Cincinnati. They were among seven federal prisoners who escaped from guards July 26, near Thornburg, Va., while they were being transported by bus from the Atlanta, Ga., penitentiary to the federal prison at Lewisburg, Pa.

Both Montague and Smith were questioned for hours today about the attempted seizure of a $56,000 army payroll aboard an Illinois Central train, south of here, last Monday. The prisoners were taken to the federal jail at Danville to-night. Postal inspectors declined to say whether the men were implicated in the robbery.

Deputy Sheriff Gene La Fontaine said the pair had confessed five burglaries, the theft of a car and the theft of four chickens. The cackling of the chickens on their rear seat of the men's car attracted the attention of a night policeman,

Danzig Nazis To Withdraw Ban on Pole Inspectors

(By The Associated Press)
Poland scored herself a point over Danzig Nazis last (Monday) night in an official announcement saying the Free City Senate had agreed to withdraw restrictions placed on Polish customs inspectors last week.

The dispute, mounting since last Friday, found Poland firm. Her mood was pointed out yesterday at a huge patriotic rally where her military commander insisted she would fight if necessary to keep her rights in Nazi-dominated Danzig.

Poland was given control of Free City customs after the World War, and last night's communique said "customs control will be integrally maintained in Danzig."

Senate Less Belligerent
The Senate's note was said to have given assurance of no intention to present Poland with a sudden stroke abolishing the customs control, and included an agreement to enter negotiations on the troublesome question.

A Munich dispatch said Albert Forster, Danzig Nazi leader, flew to Salzburg, near Adolf Hitler's Berchtesgaden estate and although Berlin sources disclaimed knowledge of the visit Danzig quarters said he had gone to consult the Fuehrer.

Political informants said they saw Berlin's guiding hand in the Senate action while Poles interpreted it as a victory for the firm attitude attributed to Warsaw in the Polish-Danzig "Margarine and Herring War."

Charges by Danzig Germans
The dispute revolves around the allegation of Danzig Germans that Poland increased the number of customs supervisors unnecessarily in Danzig. The Polish action in banning export of margarine and curtailment of herring shipments to Poland, a big user of these two important Danzig products also figured largely in the Polish-Danzig differences. The Germans charged some of the supervisors were engaged in espionage.

The seriousness of the situation was intensified by the long campaign by Nazis for return of Danzig to her pre-war status as a part of German territory.

Danzig was made a Free City after the World War under League of Nations protection. The customs regulations of Danzig, a valuable treaty in 1920, putting them under Polish law but providing for administration within Danzig territory of Danzig officials. Poland is permitted under the treaty to inspect Danzig customs with no limit on the personnel for this work.

Polish customs officials halted the export of margarine to Poland last week, declaring her customs control rights had been violated because Danzig manufacturers had refused to permit inspection of their plants.

Ballot Supersedes Strike in Detroit

Detroit, Aug. 7 (AP)—The ballot superseded the strike today as the instrument for settling labor disputes in the automobile industry.

While idle cogs in the giant General Motors machine began turning again with the end to the CIO's skilled workers strike, the projected auto plant employee elections by the Labor Board commanded the scene.

The AFL-United Auto Workers formally consented to an employee poll in the Packard Motor Car Co., which had been petitioned by the rival CIO-United Auto Workers, and then on its own asked for a similar poll among employees of General Motors plants throughout the country.

The move came as a surprise inasmuch as the UAW-AFL had earlier indicated opposition to such polls, contending the dispute between the two unions should be settled by circuit court litigation, now pending.

In the announcement that a poll would be asked in G. M. plants the UAW-AFL accused the UAW-CIO of making a "flank settlement" in ending the strike of tool and die makers in 12 General Motors plants last Saturday.

New Relief Law in Effect in Pennsylvania

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 7 (AP)—Pennsylvania had its first opportunity today to apply a new law which requires every able-bodied person on the state's cash relief rolls to work if a job is provided.

A group of 30 men started clearing brush in the city memorial park at Williamsport as the first project in the program which is designed to take as many of the 175,085 employables off the rolls.

Protesting the law, a group of Workers Security Federation members picketed the executive mansion last night. Governor Arthur H. James is on vacation.

Roosevelt Says His Court Program Has Now Been Attained

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's statement today on his court reorganization proposal:

It is worth recording that today, August 7, 1939, deserves special recognition because it marks the final objective of the comprehensive proposal for judicial reorganization which I made to the Congress on February 5, 1937. The country is naturally concerned with the attainment of proper objectives rather than any one of many possible methods proposed for the accomplishment of the end.

Two and one-half years ago I proposed the extension to the justices of the supreme court of retirement privileges then available to other federal judges. Such an act was passed March 1, 1937.

I called attention to the unwarranted attitude of the Supreme Court with reference to its exercise of constitutional powers. Measures of social and economic reform were being impeded or defeated by narrow interpretations of the constitution, and by the assumption on the part of the Supreme Court of legislative powers which properly belonged to the Congress. It is true that the precise method, which I recommended, was not adopted, but the objective, as every person in the United States knows today, was achieved. The results are not even open to dispute. Attacks recently made on the Supreme Court itself by ultra-conservative members of the bar indicate how fully our liberal ideas have already prevailed.

I called attention to the congested dockets of the federal courts, delay in disposing of cases, the need of new blood in the judiciary branch of the government, and the need of additional judges. Since then twenty-five additional judges have been provided for by the Congress, and a bill authorizing five more awaits my signature. The congested dockets and the delay have been already almost eliminated.

I called attention to the need for greater flexibility in the judicial system so that judges could be more readily assigned to areas where the courts were excessively in arrears. Under the act of August 24, 1937, a welcome improvement was made in this feature of our judicial system.

I called attention to the intolerable situation when constitutional questions involving federal statutes were passed on in private litigation, and recommended that no decision, injunction or decree on constitutional grounds should be permitted without previous notice to the attorney general and an opportunity for the United States to be heard. By the act of August 24, 1937, the attorney general was given the right to intervene in litigation between private parties involving constitutionality of federal statutes, and limitations were placed on the issuance of injunctions in similar cases in the lower court.

I called attention to the need for direct and immediate appeal to the Supreme Court in cases involving constitutionality of federal statutes, such cases to take precedence over all other matters pending in the court. This right of direct appeal was established by the act of August 24, 1937 and is now the law of the land.

I called attention to the need of the judiciary itself for effective machinery for overseeing its own dockets and expediting its own affairs. This very day I have, with great satisfaction, approved an act which sets up an administrative office for the judiciary.

Thus have been enacted into law six of the actual recommendations made by me more than two years ago—and the seventh recommendation has been accomplished through the opinions of the Supreme Court itself.

President Says His Program Is in Effect, but under Different Methods than He Requested

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—President Roosevelt pronounced the objectives of his defeated 1937 court reorganization bill fully attained tonight.

He said attacks made recently on the Supreme Court by "ultra-conservative members of the bar" indicated how fully the administration's "liberal ideas" had prevailed, even though his proposal to recognize the tribunal had not been the method by which this was accomplished.

Mr. Roosevelt named no names, but newsmen recalled that Frank J. Hogan, President of the American Bar Association, had declared not long ago that recent judicial construction had brought most if not all activities of the nation "within the orbit of Federal control."

"Recent far-reaching decisions (of the high court) compel the conclusion," Hogan told a bar association meeting in San Francisco recently, "that the American people must look to the legislature rather than the judiciary for the preservation of liberties."

Issues Formal Statement
Mr. Roosevelt spoke tonight in a formal statement issued in connection with the signing of a bill creating an administrative office to handle the fiscal affairs of all Federal courts and to keep tab on the condition of their dockets.

In his 1937 message to Congress on the judiciary, he urged creation of a court "proctor" to perform the latter function and also advanced the Supreme Court reorganization plan which set off one of the greatest political struggles since the Civil War.

Marks Final Objective
"It is worth recording" Mr. Roosevelt said, "that today, August 7, 1939, deserves special recognition because it marks the final objective of the comprehensive proposals for judicial reorganization which I made to the Congress on February 5, 1937."

"The country is naturally concerned with the attainment of proper objectives rather than any one of the many possible methods proposed for the accomplishment of the end."

Lists Seven Objectives
Then the President listed his seven objectives of 1937, all of which he said had been reached.

As to Supreme Court itself, he asserted:

"I called attention to the unwarranted attitude of the Supreme Court with reference to its exercise of constitutional powers. Measures of social and economic reform were being impeded or defeated by narrow interpretations of the constitution, and by the assumption on the part of the Supreme Court of legislative powers which properly belong to the Congress."

Says Objectives Achieved
"It is true that the precise method, which I recommended, was not adopted, but the objective, as every person in the United States knows today, was achieved. The results are not even open to dispute. Attacks recently made on the Supreme Court itself by ultra-conservative members of the bar indicate how fully our liberal ideas have already prevailed."

CIO Candidate Is Badly Defeated in Kentucky Election

John Young Brown Loses Gubernatorial Race To Keen Johnson

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 7 (AP)—Lieut. Gov. Keen Johnson, supported by Gov. A. B. "Happy" Chandler's political organization, took a lead of more than 20,000 over former U. S. Representative John Young Brown today in tabulation of votes cast Saturday in the Democratic gubernatorial primary.

The vote in 1,732 of 4,307 precincts:
Johnson, 123,314.
Brown, 102,785.

The lieutenant governor's lead was piled up "out in the state." Only 11 of 606 precincts had been tabulated in Jefferson county (Louisville), where Johnson was supported by the city administration.

Johnson, Richmond publisher, pitched his campaign principally on an attack on the Congress of Industrial Organizations, for whose United Mine Workers Brown is an attorney. Johnson called the CIO "Communist" and said John L. Lewis was a "traitor."

Young Wife Held For the Murder Of Her Husband

Mrs. Leona Draper, 19, Admits Killing Mate, Aged 41

Frederick, Md., Aug. 7 (AP)—A murder charge was filed late today against Mrs. Leona Draper, 19-year-old farm wife arrested following the shotgun slaying of her 41-year-old husband in their mountain home near the Washington county line.

She will be held for action of the September grand jury.

State Police Corporal W. K. May quoted the youthful prisoner as saying her husband beat her and she shot him, then asked a neighbor to notify police.

She surrendered peacefully and rode with May and Deputy Sheriff Carl Buhrman to the Frederick jail to await action by Patrick M. Schnauffer.

Her husband, Dewey Draper, beat her last night and again this morning, May said she told him, and when he returned to the house this morning after chores, she met him on the porch with a shotgun.

A blast from the gun struck Draper in the head.

William Capps Then Makes Crutch and Walks Down Tracks

Lorain, O., Aug. 7 (AP)—St. Joseph's hospital attaches described tonight how a 19-year-old boy, his foot crushed when he fell from a freight train, amputated his own foot and after eight hours made his way to safety with an improvised crutch.

The story was given them by William Capps, Somerset, Ky., high school student, who was reported in "good condition" after doctors again operated on his leg.

Capps told hospital authorities his foot was crushed last midnight when he fell from a train near Vermillion, O.

He said he used a penknife to cut off the injured foot near his ankle, stopped the flow of blood with a tourniquet fashioned from his clothes, fashioned a crutch from tree branches and made his way nearly three-quarters of a mile along the track before being picked up about 8 a. m. by another train crew.

Doctors said Capps was nearly exhausted when brought to the hospital, but rallied after medical attention. In the hospital operation surgeons cut off the leg to just below the knee.

Berlin Warns Poles They May Get Acquainted with German Weapons

Berlin, Aug. 7 (AP)—Germany's official news agency tonight declared that continued "challenges" by Poles might result in their "acquaintance with German weapons."

In a commentary criticizing the Polish newspaper, Czas, DNB attributed to it the threat that Poles would shoot Danzig to pieces should the Free City attempt to effect a union with Germany.

DNB said the newspaper "openly threatens a malicious attack and brutal bombardment by which Danzig should be laid in ruins."

"But Polish loudmouths must be told that they cannot ruthlessly provoke Germany in this manner," DNB said.

"Then it can happen that the Poles, although they could accomplish their criminal intention to shoot Danzig to pieces, would make an acquaintance with German weapons in such a manner they will forever lose their desire to bombard German cities again."

"That is said as a warning to Poland, for one does not play unpunished with a burning match at a powder keg."

"The conservative Polish newspaper Czas was quoted in Warsaw dispatches today as warning that 'the guns of the Polish army are facing Danzig, should authorities of the Free City not abandon in time the dangerous road they are following on orders from the outside.'"

It added that "Danzig may have peace, welfare and freedom, but it may also become the arena for a life and death fight."

Clarence Perkins Dies

Baltimore, Aug. 7 (AP)—Clarence W. Perkins, 68, special counsel and former director of the Baltimore housing authority, died today after a long illness.

Number of Federal Employees Reaches An All-Time High

Civil Workers Total 925,260, Civil Service Board Reports

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—Officials reported today that the number of civil employees in the executive branch of the government reached the highest point in history during June and that Congress during the session just ended appropriated $269,937,376 more than the president budgeted.

The civil service commission placed the number of civil employees in June at 925,260. The figure compared with 919,161 last December, when the extra postal workers were employed, and with a war-time peak estimated at 918,000. It included administrative employees paid with works program funds, but not rank-and-file WPA workers.

Employment for the month showed "the usual seasonal increase," the commission said.

The budget bureau reported, meantime, that Congress had appropriated $10,472,554,914 for the current fiscal year, which it said was $269,937,376 more than the budget estimate. In addition, it said the legislators had appropriated $1,013,582,439 for deficiencies of previous years.

The budget estimate for the present fiscal year, which the bureau said had been exceeded by Congress, did not include President Roosevelt's proposed lending program, which as first put in bill form, called for an outlay of $2,800,000,000. This item was omitted from the budget estimate on the ground that it would have been financed by RFC, rather than treasury, borrowing.

Barkley's Estimate

Both Democratic and Republican leaders in Congress have estimated the session's appropriations at sums different than that given by the budget bureau. Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, said yesterday that the total was less than $10,000,000,000 not including reappropriations of money appropriated previously but still unspent; while Rep. Taber (R-NY) said the lawmakers had appropriated $14,061,598,619, which he called the greatest sum in peace-time history.

The budget bureau's total of 1940 appropriations was exclusive of contract authorizations, reappropriations, unexpended balances and other fund made available for spending.

In its report on employment in the executive branch during June, the civil service commission said the number of civil employees had increased 22,148 from May and that the payroll had gone up $3,731,534 to a June total of $140,140,533.

Roosevelt Signs Nearly 100 Bills

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—Nearly 100 bills—most of them minor measures—received President Roosevelt's signature today.

Only a few of the bills signed into law were of general interest. Among these was one to provide for an administrative officer for federal courts.

Others included:

- Extension of federal court jurisdiction to cases of card sharps on American ships.
- Making it a criminal offense to file false claims for insured mail matters.
- Simplifying the procedure for obtaining a patent.
- Revising the rank of lieutenant-general, a position just under that of general of the armies.
- Permitting physically unfit federal judges to retire on full pay after 10 years' service.
- Fixing duty free trade quotas for certain Philippine products up to 1946, when the islands become independent.

Most of the other bills were for the relief of individuals or clarifying oversights in previous legislation.

Cary Grant Says He Will Wed Actress

New York, Aug. 7 (AP)—Cary Grant, the movie actor, said today on his return from Europe that he and Phyllis Brooks, another passenger from Finland, would be married in California after his next picture.

Grant visited his mother in Bristol, England, and said he and Miss Brooks would visit her mother before their marriage.

Father Divine May Take over N. Y. Fair

New York, Aug. 7 (AP)—Father Divine's angels, who have winged their way already into the sacrosanct precincts of high society, may next take over the world of tomorrow.

A New York World's Fair official said today that he had received a telephone call from a Divine follower suggesting that since the fair had set aside days for everything from hot dogs to royalty, it might have a Father Divine day.

"Why not?" said another official. "We could have a fish fry down by Fountain Lake." He instructed the aspiring angel to write a letter requesting that it be considered.

WARM WELCOME FOR CHINA

William B. Bankhead, Speaker of the House of Representatives, makes friends with young Dickie Lee, of Brooklyn, N. Y., five-year-old son of John Lee, one of the original Chinese revolutionists. The boy is head of the Dickie Lee Fund for Refugee Chinese Children, raising money by making speeches throughout the U. S.

Bridges Is Outstanding Radical In Files of the American Legion

San Francisco, Aug. 7 (AP)—Harry Bridges heard himself referred to today as "the outstanding name" in the files of the American Legion's radical research committee in California.

The statement was made at the CIO labor leader's deportation hearing by Harper Knowles, chairman of the Legion's committee.

Knowles, San Francisco business man and a former investigator of subversive activities for the Associated Farmers of California, last fall identified before the Dies Congressional Committee in Washington many Californians he said were Communists or Communist sympathizers.

These included Bridges and Gov. Culbert L. Olson of California, then the Democratic candidate for the gubernatorial office.

Knowles was called by Bridges' defense as an "adverse" witness in an attempt to prove improper inducements were made to government witnesses.

Deep Reverse Play Best Sutherland Says

Morgantown, W. Va., Aug. 7 (AP)—Dr. John Bain (Jock) Sutherland disclosed to some 140 high school and college coaches today that the deep reverse play had gained more ground for his University of Pittsburgh Panthers in the past ten years than any other play.

"But," stressed the veteran coach, who resigned at Pitt several months ago, "fundamentals are the main things to watch... any co-ed can design plays."

Sutherland said the deep reverse with the off tackle smash provides "more football than anything I know of."

One play, he told the coaches attending West Virginia University's fourth annual coaching school, is far better than six or seven put together loosely. He cautioned that plays should never be given teams unless needed.

Claire Bee, of Long Island University, whose basketball team have rolled up one amazing winning stretch after another, lectured on "high scoring basketball. He talked about ways and means for players to shake themselves loose on offense and spent considerable time in styles of shooting.

Wilm's Tumor Fatal To Three-Year-Old Boy

Monongahela, Pa., Aug. 7 (AP)—Long lines of friends filed past the bier containing the pale and shrunken body of three-year-old Harold Holt, Jr., the "tumor boy," at his home today.

More than 150 persons came to pay last respects to the tot whose log fight for life against the ravages of a rare Wilm's tumor ended with his death in the operating room of a New Rochelle, N. Y., hospital Friday night.

Members of the Sons of the Legion will be pall bearers at his funeral service in Nazareth Church tomorrow with the pastor, Rev. Paul Andree, officiating.

The boy's father, Harold, Sr., said the child died while preparations were being made to give him a seventh blood transfusion.

LaGuardia Against Crop Curtailment

New York, Aug. 7 (AP)—In a speech suggestive of national political ambition, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia spoke out today against crop production restrictions.

With the National Association of Retail Meat Dealers as his forum, the mayor declared: "I believe in abundance. I do not believe in any system which curtails production or in any way destroy crops."

"I want to change that system," he went on—apparently referring to the Roosevelt administration's farm policies—"which is now in reverse—and put it in high forward gear. x x x"

Roosevelt Ready For 1,000-Mile Vacation Voyage

President to Rest During Trip Along Canadian Coast

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—President Roosevelt sandwiched bill signing between conferences and many handshakes today before starting a 1,000-mile trek that will bring him both work and pleasure.

The work comes first and his journey, starting tonight takes him immediately to his Hyde Park, N. Y., study where he will consider some 200 bills which still are unsigned.

After a few days of that, he will board the navy cruiser Tuscaloosa at New York City this week-end for a lazy trip through the cool waters off the Eastern Canadian coast. He told a recent press conference that he was looking for rest and relief from hot weather. During the 10-day jaunt, he plans no work, no fishing and no stops ashore.

Oppose Special Session

Before Mr. Roosevelt left Washington, some of his Congressional aides expressed the opinion that he should not call any special session of Congress unless it becomes necessary on account of trouble abroad.

There had been discussion in some quarters of a possible extra session to consider lending, housing and neutrality legislation, all of which were blocked in the session which adjourned Saturday night.

Some highly placed administration lieutenants argued, however, that because of the temper of Congress near the last session's end it would be inadvisable to call them back before the regular term next January.

Completes Court Plan

During the busy day, the Chief Executive signed into law a bill which Attorney General Murphy said "completes the 1937 court program." The measure provides for a judicial administrative officer to handle the financial affairs of all Federal courts. Such matter previously have been handled by the Justice Department.

Referring back to the Chief Executive's bitter fight with Congress two and a half years ago over reorganization of the Supreme Court, former Attorney General Homer Cummings told newsmen that the bill signed was the "capsheet" of that struggle.

In 1937, Mr. Roosevelt proposed reorganizing the Supreme Court. Although Congress refused to do this, the court lineup was later changed through retirements and death.

Also included in his court revision plan was a proposal for the appointment of a proctor to handle the judiciary's administrative affairs. The bill signed, however, would give the new administrative officer chiefly fiscal work and the duty of gathering statistics about court dockets.

Young Wife Held For the Murder Of Her Husband

Baltimore, Aug. 7 (AP)—An "amazing" recovery of Robert Osborne, 21, from a gangster's infection was credited by physicians tonight to the recently introduced drug sulfapyridine, and described as possibly "pointing the way to a successful attack on this infection," heretofore fatal in most cases.

Osborne, a truck driver, dropped a plaster block on his right foot while unloading his truck in Philadelphia five weeks ago. The infection followed, and physicians held the case "practically hopeless" when he entered a hospital. Doctors said the infection was characterized by unusual virulence and resistance to ordinary treatment.

Osborne had a temperature of 105 degrees when the first injection of sodium sulfapyridine was applied. Within three days his temperature dropped to nearly normal. He left the hospital today, fully recovered but 35 pounds lighter.

Four physicians worked on the case.

"We only have a case like this once every two or three years," Dr. Harold Burns, one of the four said, "and death has resulted almost invariably."

Lewis's Language Condemned by AFL

Boston, Aug. 7 (AP)—A resolution condemning "alleged intemperate language" against Vice President John N. Garner by a "dual organization head" was presented today to the opening session of the 34th annual convention of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor.

At the same time, 600 delegates attending the convention applauded when a resolution was introduced proposing that the state federation's delegates to the AFL national convention be instructed to support any move to draft President Roosevelt for a third term.

The Garner resolution did not mention the name of the person criticized, but it was put before the convention less than two weeks after John L. Lewis, chief of the rival Congress of Industrial Organizations, charged at a House Labor Committee hearing that Garner was responsible for recent attacks on labor in Congress.

Lewis told the committee Garner was a "poker playing, whiskey drinking, evil old man."

25 Alleged Reds Arrested in Madrid

Madrid, Aug. 7 (AP)—Continuing an intensive drive that has resulted in 62 executions in the last three days, police tonight arrested 25 persons whom they identified as Communists.

The 62 persons disposed of by firing squads had been charged with a triple killing, and similarly, the latest arrests were accused of "numerous assassinations." Seven of their number were described as members of the "red committee of the republican war ministry that directed the defense of Madrid's long civil war siege."

Fifty-eight men and four women died before firing squads. They were accused of conspiring against the authorities and of actual complicity in the July 29 slaying of Isaac Galbaldon, inspector of military police, his 17-year-old daughter and Jose Luis Diez, a civil guard.

Escaped Slayer Caught in Barn

Springfield, O., Aug. 7 (AP)—Louis Vandervort, Wilmington slayer who led three other London prison farm inmates in a spectacular break six days ago, was captured without resistance near here today while a search was being pressed for two other convicts who escaped Saturday.

Sheriff's Deputies Russell Shirk and Ed Baker arrested Vandervort in the hay mow of a barn northwest of here after farmers reported sighting the unkempt fugitive, whose knee was gashed when the quartet escaped from the institution's second-floor hospital.

His captives left at large only James Lee, 31, Dayton slayer, and Ephraim Wells, 30, sentenced from Marietta for non-support, who broke away from a group of inmates working near the prison farm Saturday.

Three of Vandervort's companions were captured earlier. Harold Curtner, 39, Miami county robber, and Nathan King, 47, Lucas county assault convict, were arrested Friday in Lima and Charles Adomack, 41, Cuyahoga county robber, surrendered near the prison farm a few hours after the four escaped.

The Clark county deputies said Vandervort's hands were badly burned from sliding down a gauze rope used by the quartet in descending from the window from which they melted a bar with an improvised blow torch.

"Amazing" Recovery Credited to New Drug

Baltimore, Aug. 7 (AP)—An "amazing" recovery of Robert Osborne, 21, from a gangster's infection was credited by physicians tonight to the recently introduced drug sulfapyridine, and described as possibly "pointing the way to a successful attack on this infection," heretofore fatal in most cases.

Osborne, a truck driver, dropped a plaster block on his right foot while unloading his truck in Philadelphia five weeks ago. Stage and Screen Stars Threaten To Strike

New York, Aug. 7 (AP)—Stars of the stage and screen massed their forces tonight and threatened a strike if the American Federation of Labor does not revoke the new affiliation of vaudeville-night club-circus performers with the stagehands union.

The stars belong to the Associated Actors and Artists of America, theatrical union parent body, which recently expelled the American Federation of Actors, the vaudeville union, for executive mismanagement. The federation then defiantly affiliated with the stage hands. All the unions are in the A. F. L.

Today Ralph Morgan, president of the Screen Actors Guild, reassured the AAAA of the guild's loyalty and willingness to strike if the AFL does not rescind the stagehands' adoption of the vaudeville-night-club circus group.

Katharine Hepburn, Helen Hayes and Katharine Cornell, members of the stage section of the AAAA Actors' equity, already have voiced similar sentiments individually, criticizing their fellow-actress Sophie Tucker, who headed the Actors' Federation.

Colorado Strike Settlement Fails

Denver, Aug. 7 (AP)—Hopes for an immediate settlement of the Green Mountain dam strike, which brought military rule to large areas in two Colorado counties, faded today as representatives of the strikers and the contractor disagreed on plans for opening negotiations.

A hearing of the Colorado Industrial Commission was interrupted to permit negotiations, and C. D. Bromley, attorney for the Warner Construction Co., which is building the $4,000,000 dam, declared he would insist the commission participate in any discussion with four American Federation of Labor unions which called the walkout July 12 for collective bargaining recognition.

"Attacks recently made on the Supreme Court itself by ultra-conservative members of the bar indicate how fully our liberal ideas have already prevailed."

In an address before the Bar Association at San Francisco, Hogan said:

Except for three appearances before a Parish (county) grand jury at Baton Rouge, and two grand jury appearances here, Leche has since remained at his home in Covington, La.

Leche headed Louisiana's delegation to the 1936 Democratic National convention, and still is Democratic National committeeman for the state.

Lewi, CIO president, would "run" Kentucky if Brown were elected.

Brown retorted that Johnson sought to pit "capital against labor" and claimed he was favored by the Roosevelt administration. President Roosevelt took no sides publicly.

Urey Woodson, Editor, Dies in Kentucky

Owensboro, Ky., Aug. 7 (AP)—A heart attack ended today the 60-year newspaper and political career of Urey Woodson, who was credited with discovering Irvin S. Cobb and giving him his first boost toward fame as a writer and humorist.

Woodson, who retired 10 years ago as publisher of the Owensboro Messenger, had returned home from Washington to vote in the Democratic primary last Saturday.

He would have been 80 years old on Aug. 16.

The white-haired former secretary of the Democratic National Committee had announced on July 24 his retirement as custodian of the federal alien property bureau, a position he held six years.

Ocean Freighter Hits an Iceberg Off Newfoundland

Beaverhill Slightly Damaged but Continues Voyage

Boston, Aug. 7 (AP)—Barely two days after she was nudged by an iceberg as she crept across the North Atlantic in an early morning fog, the Canadian Pacific freighter Beaverhill continued tonight on her course for London, apparently undamaged.

She was approximately 100 miles off the coast of Newfoundland above the most-used steamship lanes, when she struck at 5:30 A. (E.S.T.) this morning.

Such accidents have been occasional since the luxury liner Titanic struck an iceberg in the same waters on April 14, 1912, and sank with a loss of 1,517 lives, and not a life has been lost as a result of a brush with a berg since the International Ice Patrol was established in 1914.

Three Ships to Rescue

This morning's first, terse cabling radio report that the Beaverhill had struck an iceberg—much dreaded of navigation hazards in the northern seas—swung the bow of three vessels toward her position. The liner Ausonia, first to get the 10,000-ton, passengerless freighter's position, stood by as the steamship Montclair and the U. S. Coast Guard cutter Champlain, on International Ice Patrol picked their way to her aid through a dense fog.

For several hours the Beaverhill pushed slowly along, the Ausonia beside her, while Captain T. Jones checked the damage to his ship.

Bottom Tank Damaged

Then, the skipper reported "4 double bottom tank damaged, but its vessel's inner hull apparently intact and taking no water, and added the reassuring note that the Beaverhill would reach London scheduled on Aug. 13.

That was the only word from the 803-foot vessel, out of Montreal with a crew of 74.

The details of the accident were not known and reports of the collision were received only by relay from the cutter Champlain. The extent of damage was contained in a private advice to the Canadian Pacific's Montreal headquarters.

Four Killed in Crash of Bomber

London, Aug. 7 (AP)—A royal air force bomber crashed on a steep cliff on the English channel, killing four crew members, including the pilot. The bomber was a Blenheim, and it was on a mission to attack a German ship. The crash occurred at night, and the bomber was seen to explode on impact with the cliff.

American Forced To Leave Chinese Mission

Peiping, Aug. 8.—(Tuesday)—Two United States missionaries reported today to have been forced to leave their mission in Shan Province by the Japanese-sponsored anti-American campaign.

Missionary sources said that Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Scoville of Los Angeles, Calif., both of the Christian Inland Mission, had to flee from Hsuehsien. They were reported to have taken refuge with other missionaries at Kiehshien.

Meanwhile a messenger left for Baptist mission hospital at Chienhsien in an attempt to reach Kiehshien to determine the fate of a number of American missionaries there. Reports received here Saturday said the American colony of Kiehshien was preparing to flee because of the anti-American campaign.

Number of Federal Employees Reaches An All-Time High

Civil Workers Total 925,260, Civil Service Board Reports

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—Officials reported today that the number of civil employees in the executive branch of the government reached the highest point in history during June and that Congress during the session just ended appropriated $260,937,376 more than the president budgeted.

The civil service commission placed the number of civil employees in June at 925,260. The figure compared with 919,181 last December, when the extra postal workers were employed, and with a war-time peak estimated at 918,000. It included administrative employees paid with works program funds, but not rank-and-file WPA workers.

Employment for the month showed "the usual seasonal increase," the commission said.

The budget bureau reported, meantime, that Congress had appropriated $10,472,354,914 for the current fiscal year, which it said was $260,937,376 more than the budget estimate. In addition, it said the legislators had appropriated $1,013,582,439 for deficiencies of previous years.

The budget estimate for the present fiscal year, which the bureau said had been exceeded by Congress, did not include President Roosevelt's proposed lending program, which as first put in bill form, called for an outlay of $2,800,000,000. This item was omitted from the budget estimate on the ground that it would have been financed by RFC, rather than treasury, borrowing.

Barkley's Estimate

Both Democratic and Republican leaders in Congress have estimated the session's appropriations at sums different than that given by the budget bureau. Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader, said yesterday that the total was less than $10,000,000,000 not including reappropriations of money appropriated previously but still unspent; while Rep. Taber (R-NY) said the lawmakers had appropriated $14,961,598,619, which he called the greatest sum in peacetime history.

The budget bureau's total of 1940 appropriations was exclusive of contract authorizations, reappropriations, unexpended balances and other fund made available for spending.

In its report on employment in the executive branch during June, the civil service commission said the number of civil employees had increased 22,148 from May and that the payroll had gone up $3,731,534 to a June total of $140,140,533.

Roosevelt Signs Nearly 100 Bills

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—Nearly 100 bills—most of them minor measures—received President Roosevelt's signature today.

Only a few of the bills signed into law were of general interest. Among these was one to provide for an administrative officer for federal courts.

Others included: Extension of federal court jurisdiction to cases of card sharps on American ships.

Making it a criminal offense to file false claims for insured mail matters.

Simplifying the procedure for obtaining a patent.

Revising the rank of lieutenant-general, a position just under that of general of the armies.

Permitting physically unfit federal judges to retire on full pay after 10 years' service.

Fixing duty free trade quotas for certain Philippine products up to 1946, when the islands become independent.

Most of the other bills were for the relief of individuals or clarifying oversights in previous legislation.

Cary Grant Says He Will Wed Actress

New York, Aug. 7 (AP)—Cary Grant, the movie actor, said today on his return from Europe that he and Phyllis Brooks, another passenger from Finland, would be married in California after his next picture.

Grant visited his mother in Bristol, England, and said he and Miss Brooks would visit her mother before their marriage.

Father Divine May Take over N. Y. Fair

New York, Aug. 7 (AP)—Father Divine's angels, who have winged their way already into the sacrosanct precincts of high society, may next take over the world of tomorrow.

A New York World's Fair official said today that he had received a telephone call from a Divine follower suggesting that since the fair had set aside days for everything from hot dogs to royalty, it might have a Father Divine day.

"Why not?" said another official. "We could have a fish fry down by Fountain Lake." He instructed the aspiring angel to write a letter requesting that it be considered.

Bridges Is Outstanding Radical In Files of the American Legion

San Francisco, Aug. 7 (AP)—Harry Bridges heard himself referred to today as "the outstanding name" in the files of the American Legion's radical research committee in California.

The statement was made at the CIO labor leader's deportation hearing by Harper Knowles, chairman of the Legion's committee.

Knowles, San Francisco business man and a former investigator of subversive activities for the Associated Farmers of California, last fall identified before the Dies Congressional Committee in Washington many Californians he said were Communists or Communist sympathizers.

These included Bridges and Gov. Culbert L. Olson of California, then the Democratic candidate for the gubernatorial office.

Knowles was called by Bridges' defense as an "adverse" witness in an attempt to prove improper inducements were made to government witnesses.

He denied snipers and other employers—as charged by Bridges—were behind his committee or that he played a part in an alleged conspiracy with immigration officials at Portland and Seattle to bring about the union leader's deportation.

The defense sought to show the case against Bridges was prepared by other than government officials as part of the alleged conspiracy.

Knowles testified he attended meetings in San Francisco at which Ivan Cox, a former secretary-treasurer of the Longshoremen's union, discussed and finally gave an affidavit against Bridges.

Cox, in a suit subsequently withdrawn, also named Bridges and 503 other persons as alleged Communist conspirators seeking to "dominate the Pacific coast." The suit asked $100,000 damages.

Knowles denied any hand in preparation of the suit but asserted he gave Cox $10 after it was filed.

Deep Reverse Play Best Sutherland Says

Morgantown, W. Va., Aug. 7 (AP)—Dr. John Bain (Jock) Sutherland disclosed to some 140 high school and college coaches today that the deep reverse play had gained more ground for his University of Pittsburgh Panthers in the past ten years than any other play.

"But," stressed the veteran coach, who resigned at Pitt several months ago, "fundamentals are the main things to watch... any co-ed can design plays."

Sutherland said the deep reverse with the off tackle smash provides "more football than anything I know of."

One play, he told the coaches attending West Virginia University's fourth annual coaching school, is far better than six or seven put together loosely. He cautioned that plays should never be given teams unless needed.

Claire Bee, of Long Island University, whose basketball team have rolled up one amazing winning stretch after another, lectured on "high scoring basketball. He talked about ways and means for players to shake themselves loose on offense and spent considerable time in styles of shooting.

Wilm's Tumor Fatal To Three-Year-Old Boy

Monongahela, Pa., Aug. 7 (AP)—Long lines of friends filed past the bier containing the pale and shrunken body of three-year-old Harold Holt, Jr., the "tumor boy," at his home today.

More than 150 persons came to pay last respects to the tot whose long fight for life against the ravages of a rare Wilms' tumor ended with his death in the operating room of a New Rochelle, N. Y., hospital Friday night.

Members of the Sons of the Legion will be pall bearers at his funeral service in Nazareth Church tomorrow with the pastor, Rev. Paul Andree, officiating.

The boy's father, Harold, Sr., said the child died while preparations were being made to give him a seventh blood transfusion.

LaGuardia Against Crop Curtailment

New York, Aug. 7 (AP)—In a speech suggestive of national political ambition, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia spoke out today against crop production restrictions.

With the National Association of Retail Meat Dealers as his forum, the mayor declared: "I believe in abundance. I do not believe in any system which curtails production or in any way drops crops."

"I want to change that system," he went on—apparently referring to the Roosevelt administration's farm policies—"which is now in reverse—and put it in high forward gear. x x x"

Roosevelt Ready For 1,000-Mile Vacation Voyage

President to Rest During Trip Along Canadian Coast

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—President Roosevelt sandwiched bill signing between conferences and many handshakes today before starting a 1,000-mile trek that will bring him both work and pleasure.

The work comes first and his journey, starting tonight, takes him immediately to his Hyde Park, N. Y., study where he will consider some 200 bills which still are unsigned.

After a few days of that, he will board the navy cruiser Tuscaloosa at New York City this week-end for a lazy trip through the cool waters off the Eastern Canadian coast. He told a recent press conference that he was looking for rest and relief from hot weather. During the 10-day jaunt, he plans no work, no fishing and no stops ashore.

Oppose Special Session

Before Mr. Roosevelt left Washington, some of his Congressional aides expressed the opinion that he should not call any special session of Congress unless it becomes necessary on account of trouble abroad.

There had been discussion in some quarters of a possible extra session to consider lending, housing and neutrality legislation, all of which were blocked in the session which adjourned Saturday night.

Some highly placed administration lieutenants argued, however, that because of the temper of Congress near the last session's end it would be inadvisable to call it back before the regular term next January.

Completes Court Plan

During the busy day, the Chief Executive signed into law a bill which Attorney General Murphy said "completes the 1937 court program." The measure provides for a judicial administrative officer to handle the financial affairs of all Federal courts. Such matter previously has been handled by the Justice Department.

Referring back to the Chief Executive's bitter fight with Congress two and a half years ago over reorganization of the Supreme Court, former Attorney General Homer Cummings told newsmen that the bill signed was the "capstone" of that struggle.

In 1937, Mr. Roosevelt proposed reorganizing the Supreme Court. Although Congress refused to do this, the court lineup was later changed through retirements and death.

Also included in his court revision plan was a proposal for the appointment of a proctor to handle the judiciary's administrative affairs. The bill signed, however, would give the new administrative officer chiefly fiscal work and the duty of gathering statistics about court dockets.

Lewis's Language Condemned by AFL

Boston, Aug. 7 (AP)—A resolution condemning "alleged intemperate language" against Vice President John N. Garner by a "dual organization head" was presented today to the opening session of the 54th annual convention of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor.

At the same time, 600 delegates attending the convention applauded when a resolution was introduced proposing that the state federation's delegates to the AFL national convention be instructed to support any move to draft President Roosevelt for a third term.

The Garner resolution did not mention the name of the person criticized, but it was put before the convention less than two weeks after John L. Lewis, chief of the rival Congress of Industrial Organizations, charged at a House Labor Committee hearing that Garner was responsible for recent attacks on labor in Congress.

Lewis told the committee Garner was a "poker playing, whisky drinking, evil old man."

25 Alleged Reds Arrested in Madrid

Madrid, Aug. 7 (AP)—Continuing an intensive drive that has resulted in 62 executions in the last three days, police tonight arrested 25 persons whom they identified as Communists.

The 62 persons disposed of by firing squads had been charged with a triple killing, and similarly, the latest arrests were accused of "numerous assassinations." Seven of their number were described as members of the "red committee of the republican war ministry that directed the defense of Madrid's long civil war siege."

Fifty-eight men and four women died before firing squads. They were accused of conspiring against the authorities and of actual complicity in the July 29 slaying of Isaac Galdon, inspector of military police, his 17-year-old daughter and Jose Luis Diez, a civil guard.

Escaped Slayer Caught in Barn

Springfield, O., Aug. 7 (AP)—Louis Vandervort, Wilmington slayer who led three other London prison farm inmates in a spectacular break six days ago, was captured without resistance near here today while a search was being pressed for two other convicts who escaped Saturday.

Sheriff's Deputies Russell Shick and Ed Baker arrested Vandervort in the hay mow of a barn northwest of here after farmers reported sighting the unkempt fugitive, whose knee was gashed when the quartet escaped from the institution's second-floor hospital.

His captor left at large only James Lee, 31, Dayton slayer, and Ephraim Wells, 30, sentenced from Marietta for non-support, who broke away from a group of inmates working near the prison farm Saturday.

Three of Vandervort's companions were captured earlier. Harold Currier, 39, Miami county robber, and Nathan King, 47, Lucas county assault convict, were arrested Friday in Lima and Charles Adomack, 41, Cuyahoga county robber, surrendered near the prison farm a few hours after the four escaped.

The Clark county deputies said Vandervort's hands were badly burned from sliding down a gauze rope used by the quartet in descending from the window from which they melted a bar with an improvised blow torch.

national anti-crime clearing house, was selected with extraordinary secrecy, no outsiders being permitted when the court met. Its personnel was likewise unusual, the list of its membership being studied with men of far more than average business and professional experience, including a half-dozen highly-paid industrial executives.

"Amazing" Recovery Credited to New Drug

Baltimore, Aug. 7 (AP)—An "amazing" recovery of Robert Osborne, 21, from a gangrenous infection was credited by physicians tonight to the recently introduced drug sulfa-pyridine, and described as possibly "pointing the way to a successful attack on this infection," heretofore fatal in most cases.

Osborne, a truck driver, dropped a plaster block on his right foot while unloading his truck in Philadelphia five weeks ago. The infection followed, and physicians held the case "practically hopeless" when he entered a hospital. Doctors said the infection was characterized by unusual virulence and resistance to ordinary treatment.

Osborne had a temperature of 105 degrees when the first injection of sodium sulfa-pyridine was applied. Within three days his temperature dropped to nearly normal. He left the hospital today, fully recovered but 35 pounds lighter.

Four physicians worked on the case.

"We only have a case like this once every two or three years," Dr. Harold Burns, one of the four said, "and death has resulted almost invariably."

Stage and Screen Stars Threaten To Strike

New York, Aug. 7 (AP)—Stars of the stage and screen massed their forces tonight and threatened a strike if the American Federation of Labor does not revoke the new affiliation of vaudeville-night club-chairs unions.

The stars belong to the Associated Actors and Artists of America, theatrical union parent body, which recently expelled the American Federation of Actors, the vaudeville union, for executive mismanagement. The federation then defiantly affiliated with the stage hands. All the unions are in the A. F. L.

Today Ralph Morgan, president of the Screen Actors Guild, reassured the AAAA of the guild's loyalty and willingness to strike if the AFL does not rescind the stagehands' adoption of the vaudeville-night-club circus group.

Katharine Hepburn, Helen Hayes and Katharine Cornell, members of the stage section of the AAAA Actors' equity, already have voiced similar sentiments individually, criticizing their fellow-actress Sophie Tucker, who headed the Actors' Federation.

Colorado Strike Settlement Fails

Denver, Aug. 7 (AP)—Hopes for an immediate settlement of the Green Mountain dam strike, which brought military rule to large areas in two Colorado counties, faded today as representatives of the strikers and the contractor disagreed on plans for opening negotiations.

A hearing of the Colorado Industrial Commission was interrupted to permit negotiations, and C. D. Bromley, attorney for the Warner Construction Co., which is building the $4,000,000 dam, declared he would insist the commission participate in any discussion with four American Federation of Labor unions which called the walkout July 12 for collective bargaining recognition.

RECOVERING FROM KIDNAPING

Worn by his ordeal, the Rev. Gerould Goldner, 29-year-old Ohio pastor, recuperates in bed at his room in Jerusalem YMCA after being released by Arab bandits who held him prisoner for a week. When the band's demand for $5,000 ransom was not met, they settled for a much smaller sum.

adopted, but the objective, as every person in the United States knows today, was achieved.

"Attacks recently made on the Supreme Court itself by ultra-conservative members of the bar indicate how fully our liberal ideas have already prevailed."

The President's statement recalled to newsmen that Frank J. Hogan, President of the American Bar Association, had accused the Supreme Court recently of "replacing stability with instability" in national government.

In an address before the Bar Association at San Francisco, Hogan said:

"Recent far-reaching decisions (of the high court) compel the conclusion that the American people must look to the legislature rather than the judiciary for the preservation of x x x of liberties."

Except for three appearances before a Parish (county) grand jury at Baton Rouge, and two grand jury appearances here, Leche has since remained at his home in Covington, La.

Leche headed Louisiana's delegation to the 1936 Democratic National convention, and still is Democratic national committee member for the state.

Owensboro, Ky., Aug. 7 (AP)—A heart attack ended today the 60-year newspaper and political career of Urey Woodson, who was credited with discovering Irvin S. Cobb and giving him his first boost toward fame as a writer and humorist.

Woodson, who retired 10 years ago as publisher of the Owensboro Messenger, had returned home from Washington to vote in the Democratic primary last Saturday.

New Deal Defeats in 1939 Congress Bring FDR's Score to 7-Year Low

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
AP Feature Service Writer

Washington—President Roosevelt has lost another bout in Congress—his fourth unsuccessful struggle since his re-election in 1936 to complete the New Deal program.

This despite the fact that he began his second term with voter support and a congressional majority unparalleled in American political history.

Three of the defeats came in regular sessions of Congress—1937, 1938 and 1939—and one in a special session in the fall of 1937, called to extend aid to farmers.

Yet, owing to FDR's record-setting domination of the national legislature in his first term, the President's record for the seven years is 33 major legislative victories to 16 defeats—a high batting average of .673.

An Amazing Display

The President started out with a perfect percentage of 1.000 in 1933, Congress enacting eight measures and rejecting none in an amazing display of speedy co-operation with the man in the White House.

During his first term (the four years of so-called "rubber stamp" Congresses), the New Deal chalked up 25 victories as against 6 defeats for an average of .806.

But the second term record so far is different—8 Roosevelt triumphs to 10 reverses, an average of .444.

The biggest—and most "crucial"—reverse was the first one of the second term, the defeat of Supreme Court enlargement. This marked a sudden turning of an overwhelming and supposedly pliant Democratic majority in Congress against control of the Capitol from the White House.

Second biggest setback came at the recent session, when Congress refused to act on neutrality legislation despite the President's insistence that such action was imperative because of the critical European situation.

Victory On Armament

Rated as Roosevelt victories in the 1939 session were Congress okays of a record peacetime armament program and of government reorganization.

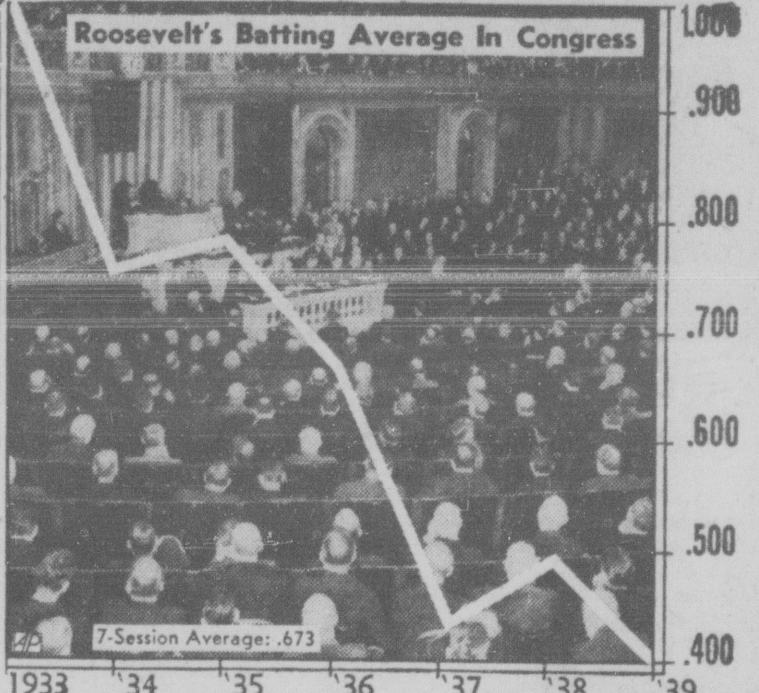

Listed as defeats, in addition to the action on neutrality legislation, were the complete repeal of the tax on undistributed profits and the vote of the house to investigate the National Labor Relations board.

The New Deal won a partial victory in the recent monetary battle. The President's power to revalue the dollar was continued, but this was partly offset by an increase in the price of silver (opposed by the administration); so the result of the contest is not listed in either the victory or defeat column.

Similarly, the President won his demand for WPA funds, but Congress drastically revised the relief organization's operations, some of the changes being very unsatisfactory to the administration.

Score For The Farmer
Approval of a $2,194,000,000 farm aid measure—a quarter of a billion dollars more than the President recommended—was neither a New Deal nor an anti-New Deal victory but rather just another triumph for the farm bloc in Congress.

Outstanding victories of the Roosevelt administration in early New Deal days when it exerted overwhelming power were: Increased control by the government over the nation's credit system, strict regulation of the sale of securities, government payments to

Against this picture of President Roosevelt addressing the 1939 Congress is charted his batting average on the basis of legislative victories and defeats since he took office. The chart omits the short 1937 special session, which was called in the Fall to enact emergency farm-aid legislation but deferred passage of an agricultural bill until the following regular session began in January, 1938.

New Deal Defeats in 1939 Congress Bring FDR's Score to 7-Year Low

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
AP Feature Service Writer

Washington—President Roosevelt has lost another bout in Congress—his fourth unsuccessful struggle since his re-election in 1936 to complete the New Deal program.

This despite the fact that he began his second term with voter support and a congressional majority unparalleled in American political history.

Three of the defeats came in regular sessions of Congress—1937, 1938 and 1939—and one in a special session in the fall of 1937, called to extend aid to farmers.

Yet, owing to FDR's record-setting domination of the national legislature in his first term, the President's record for the seven years is 33 major legislative victories to 16 defeats—a high batting average of .673.

An Amazing Display
The President started out with a perfect percentage of 1.000 in 1933, Congress enacting eight measures and rejecting none in an amazing display of speedy co-operation with the man in the White House.

During his first term (the four years of so-called "rubber stamp" congresses), the New Deal chalked up 25 victories as against 6 defeats for an average of .806.

But the second term record so far is different—8 Roosevelt triumphs to 10 reverses, an average of .444.

The biggest—and most "crucial"—reverse was the first one of the second term, the defeat of Supreme Court enlargement. This marked a sudden turning of an overwhelming and supposedly pliant Democratic majority in Congress against control of the Capitol from the White House.

Second biggest setback came at the recent session, when Congress refused to act on neutrality legislation despite the President's insistence that such action was imperative because of the critical European situation.

Victory On Armament
Rated as Roosevelt victories in the 1939 session were Congress okays of a record peacetime armament program and of government reorganization.

Listed as defeats, in addition to the action on neutrality legislation, were the complete repeal of the tax on undistributed profits and the vote of the house to investigate the National Labor Relations board.

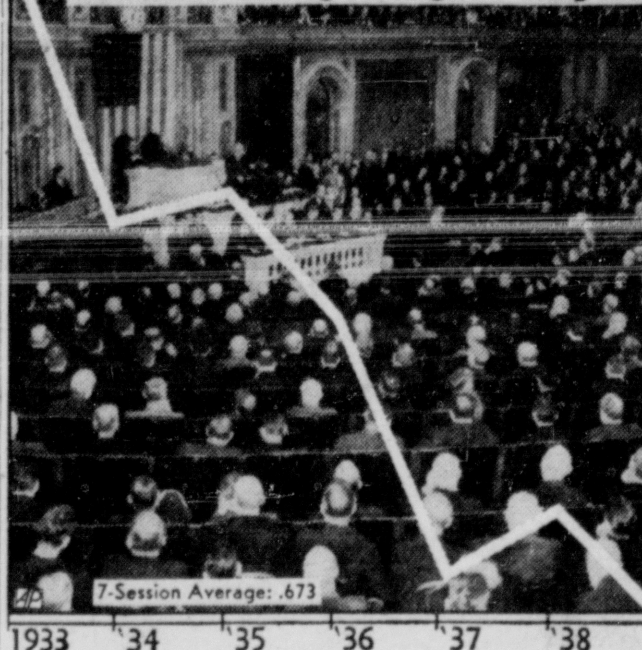

The New Deal won a partial victory in the recent monetary battle. The President's power to revalue the dollar was continued, but this was partly offset by an increase in the price of silver (opposed by the administration); so the result of the contest is not listed in either the victory or defeat column.

Similarly, the President won his demand for WPA funds, but Congress drastically revised the relief organization's operations, some of the changes being very unsatisfactory to the administration.

Score For The Farmer
Approval of a $2,194,000,000 farm aid measure—a quarter of a billion dollars more than the President recommended—was neither a New Deal nor an anti-New Deal victory but rather just another triumph for the farm bloc in Congress.

Outstanding victories of the Roosevelt administration in early New Deal days when it exerted overwhelming power were: Increased control by the government over the nation's credit system, strict regulation of the sale of securities, government payments to

Roosevelt's Batting Average In Congress

Against this picture of President Roosevelt addressing the 1939 Congress is charted his batting average on the basis of legislative victories and defeats since he took office. The chart omits the short 1937 special session, which was called in the Fall to enact emergency farm-aid legislation but deferred passage of an agricultural bill until the following regular session began in January, 1938.

farmers for crop control, insurance of bank deposits, the Wagner labor act to enforce collective bargaining, establishment of TVA and other governmental power projects, drastic regulation of public utilities, the act to enforce collective bargaining, NRA (invalidated by the Supreme Court) and the social security act.

End of an Era

CITING fourteen specific accomplishments by Republicans in co-operation with the real Democrats in the fight to save America from the New Deal, Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, Republican leader in the House of Representatives, declares that the "era of rash and reckless experimentation is ended" and that "America is again seeking the paths of orderly progress under law."

Martin is quite right about that and big encouragement has been given everybody by the achievement. As heretofore noted in these columns, and as Representative Martin says, business confidence began to show some signs of revival in proportion as the Congress reasserted its legislative independence. The only obstacles standing today in the path of a solid and sustained business recovery are the administrative confusions and failures of the so-called New Deal.

The fourteen specific accomplishments listed by Martin are the step taken toward economy and common sense in federal finances, refusal to lift the debt limit, refusal to pledge American involvement in European power politics, a forced measure of tax revision, revision of the Social Security program, limitation of subsidized government competition with private enterprise, reform in the vicious manipulation of WPA work-relief, adoption of the Hatch bill, strengthened deportation laws, restoration of checks and balances in the government reorganization bill, probe of the Labor board, investigation of the so-called reciprocal trade treaty program, a hard fight to re-establish the Republican principle of sound money and a step toward curtailment of the so-called "emergency" powers of the executive.

As Martin says, in reviewing the work of the session, the Republican minority faithfully kept its pledge to work constructively and not be simply a party of criticism, having fought for economy and sanity in government and yet not hesitating to support sound measures brought forth by Democrats. Moreover, encouraged by growing popular support of this course, the Republicans are pledged by Martin to continue this fight for fundamental Americanism and to battle the New Deal socialism at every step within and without the Congress.

"The people of the United States are tired of hit-or-miss government," Martin rightly declares. They want "to get out of the red and back to work." They want "to try honest book-keeping, honest politics and honest Americanism for a change."

They certainly do.

On the Go Again

THE COUNTRY has had the experts' opinions on the likelihood of immediate war in Europe, and they do not jibe. One man's meat is another man's poison. So why not turn to the verdict of a much larger group that acts en masse and on hunches—the tourists?

The American tourists are saying it with round-trip tickets. When the season started trans-Atlantic liners were leaving their ports with only handfuls of passengers. Things looked dark, both in the international political field and in the tourist bureaus. People just weren't taking the chance of being stranded in a war zone.

But now Atlantic ship travel is booming. Most ships are nearly "full-up," and some have had to refuse reservations. The world—America at least—is on the go again.

Perhaps the succession of crises with nothing overt happening has bred nonchalance; or maybe the business pick-up has turned people's minds to vacations abroad. It is also just possible that some mass instinct has told them that they are safe for the time being.

Whatever the reason, the ship companies are the beneficiaries—as well as the countries in which American dollars are being spent.

Sorry Record

AS REPRESENTATIVE MARTIN, Republican leader, has declared, pump priming is a demonstrated illusion.

"Now in the seventh year of federal squandering," Martin says, "we still have ten millions unemployed; farm prices are at bankruptcy levels; our export market for farm products still is diminishing; our rich home market is being flooded by an increasing tide of low-cost industrial and agricultural products from abroad, while under the New Deal's misguided policies of internationalism and free trade, the vaunted American standard of living is being lowered steadily for all our people."

Nobody can dispute these sorry facts. It is high time to change all of them for the better. The Congress has made a splendid start in that direction. Members are returning home to ascertain the sentiment of their constituents. It is the duty of the people now to let the members know how they feel about this awful record and to encourage their legislative representatives to continue the work of correction and reform.

A National Emergency

WHEN an emergency arises, the American people act.

When an epidemic strikes, the nation mobilizes to conquer it.

When flood, fire or hurricane roars across the country, millions of dollars and trainloads of food and clothing pour into the stricken area.

If an enemy invaded our shores, every one of us would rush to the defense.

Today we are faced with a national emergency as great as any of these—greater, in fact, because it is less spectacular and arouses less alarm.

This emergency is the rising traffic toll. A lot of us have had the smug idea lately that we had the traffic problem whipped. Last year the nation cut its death toll nineteen per cent. This year started out the same way.

Then something happened. We started stepping on the gas and jaywalking again. Accidents shot up. The safety drive faltered, then bogged down.

And in June, the National Safety Council reports, the traffic death toll went up for the first time in twenty months.

In June alone 2,330 persons were killed on streets and highways. Eighty thousand others were injured. And the heavy vacation months still are to be heard from!

Is that an emergency or not? Your help is needed—needed just as much as in fire or flood.

Not your money. Not your time. Not your services.

Just a little common horse sense when you drive and walk!

Everybody Pays Taxes

CERTAINLY everybody pays taxes.

Take a new dress as an example. Alfred C. Frodel, eminent tax attorney and consultant, has revealed in a study that in the manufacture and sale of a dress there are 125 taxes paid from the cotton grower to the retailer!

Mr. Frodel says there are nine taxes paid by the cotton grower, 12 by the cotton ginner, 16 by the transportation companies, 14 by the cotton mill, 14 by the bleachers and dyers, 14 by the button and trimming manufacturers, 14 by the dress manufacturer, 16 by dress wholesalers, and 16 taxes paid by the retailer!

These taxes are passed along in the price of the dress. In the end you, who think you pay no tax, foot the bill for a part of these taxes, necessarily tacked on as a legitimate part of the cost of the manufacture of the dress. This extra money goes to pay New Deal bills.

In short, out of every dollar you put into the price of the dress, fifteen cents is taken in taxes to pay the government's debts.

Certainly everybody pays!

Canada's Telephones

CANADA is second only to the United States in the number of telephones per capita, the figure being 13.7 telephones per 100 of population in the United States, against 11.5 in Canada, says Canada's Weekly. This is a high figure when it is borne in mind that Canada has a low density of population and that about forty-six per cent of this population is rural. The only countries having a greater total number of telephones are the United States, Germany, Great Britain and France.

The telephone industry in Canada enjoyed a steady growth up to 1930, when a peak figure of slightly over 1,400,000 telephones was recorded. There was a substantial decrease in the following three years, the figure for 1933 being approximately 1,190,000. Since 1933 almost two-thirds of this loss has been recovered, the number of telephones at the end of 1937 being around 1,320,000.

At Runcorn, England, striking factory girls sang loudly at the mill gates until their demands were met. There have been leases broken thus, but strikes are new.

Manager Whalen is irked by mild attendance at his fair. There are days when the World of Tomorrow seems no more popular than the world of today.

Maybe times will improve now that Mars, the war god's planet, is moving away and our nearest sister planet will be Venus, named after the goddess of love.

That is a good slogan: "You can't strike against the government," but another good one is "You are crazy to vote against the American voters."

From faraway Glasgow, in Bonnie Scotland, a city father arrives to take in the New York fair, and just in time for the cut rates.

Annual Advice on Tree-Planting

By MARSHALL MASLIN

If you're planning a garden, plant an oak! Don't say: "But oaks grow so slowly. I want trees that will make a showing right away."

Don't worry about that—oaks grow much faster than you think. Before you know it almost an oak will be towering above your head.

Plant other things, too, but be sure to plant an oak. Plant an acacia. It will grow swiftly. If you do not live in too cold a climate, and make yellow bloom in the spring. Plant yarrow by a wall, plant hollyhocks that climb toward the sky in a season, plant roses that climb and adorn a wall and shower you with petals. Plant dahlias that die down each year, plant primrose that wears itself out in the making of beauty, plant that leggy butterfly bush that fills a corner in a year, plant petunias and tulips and gladioli and all those other flowers that make a riot of color in your garden. Plant little things that delicately grow close to the crevices of a rock.

But plant an oak. It has small leaves. You will not notice its flowers. The bees will not swarm about it. Even the birds will not nest in it at first. It will not, in its youth, make much of a show. But it will last!

It will not die down in a season. It will anchor itself deep in your earth and make plans for a long stay. And you will say to yourself: "This tree will last longer on this earth than I ever shall. It will make a shade when I am gone. And though people will never wonder who planted that tree, they will admire the noble fellow and be grateful for its company."

Plant an oak in yourself. Live lightly, do foolish things, waste some of your time extravagantly. Don't be so solemn. Don't imagine that everything you do or say is important. Drop that black disguise of dignity and decorum and be the Genial Idiot you like to be. But somewhere in your changing heart, plant an oak.

Take one corner of yourself seriously. Guard one part. Decide that this one thing in life is important and worth protecting. . . I don't know what that one thing is for you, I'm not saying what it is for me—but I know that it exists and is an oak that will survive and shelter your life when all the light things and the trivial interests have gone back to nothingness again.

You'll not be sorry that you planted an oak!

EDWIN C. HILL

Japan and Russia report some mighty good shooting from the desolate, battle-torn frontier between Manchukuo and Outer Mongolia.

No war has been declared, but an admitted difference of opinion exists and this has led to a quality of aerial gun-play that would have made Wyatt Earp or Wild Bill Hickok proud as Punch if they had fought in combat planes instead of on cayuses.

Japan's side of the argument seems to be that Russia is moving in without so much as a Muscovite "Please!" Russia's side is that Japan is spraddling over more territory than a big dog in a very little manger.

Both sides have gone into the air higher than kites and the resulting casualties, reported, are startling. Occidental aviation experts, Airmen are being shot down like sitting ducks. Like flies! The gunning of the Lafayette Escadrille back in 1917 and 1918 was only pea-shooting by comparison. Richtofen's Flying Circus was a complete misfire.

Japan In First

Japan got in the first lick on May 28 with word of seventeen Soviet planes downed. Two days later she reported thirty more. Then on June 23 a score of her ships engaged 150 Russians and bagged 49. Next day they bagged twelve more.

The sleepy Russian giant woke up about this time and on the same day announced that her fliers had brought down twenty-five Japanese planes. Japan countered on June 26 with a bag of ninety-eight. Next day Russia claimed another twenty-five against only six claimed by Japan. This excellent score, however, took most of the tuck out of the Russian fliers and for almost a month they didn't pull a trigger, so far as any official communique went.

Claiming Everything

Meanwhile Japan was claiming everything in sight. On July 5, fifty Russian planes, on July 10, fifty-five more, and on July 24 another fifty-eight. Russia didn't file another entry until July 25. Then, however, she made up for lost time. On that day she said fifty-eight Japanese planes had been dropped.

Old Cleobulus might have judged so much destruction a bit extreme. That great sage of Ancient Greece had the reasonable notion that excesses ought to be avoided. Neither Japan nor Russia, however, seems ever to have heard of him, nor of little Jean Francois La Harpe, who warned in one of his plodding Parliaments that "We always weaken wherever we exaggerate."

All Records Broken

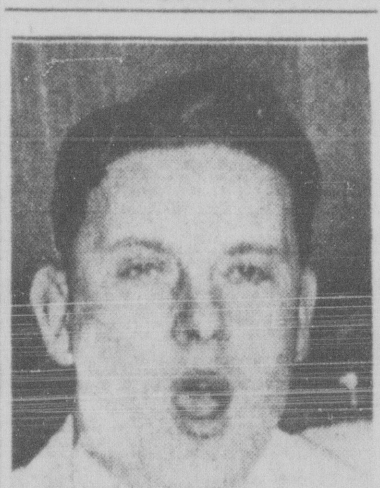

No one in Tokio has conceded any exaggeration at all. Barring exaggeration there isn't a military flyer in this country who will deny that each side has broken all existing records for bulls-eye shooting. The score is so good that the experts are flabbergasted. They don't understand how so many planes can be maintained in such a desolate region. For their own part, they admit they couldn't keep 260 ships fit for fighting in any airport around New York, with all its resources.

As a matter of fact the Russians and Japanese are flabbergasted, too. They can't understand, either, how the other fellow does it. Each earnestly explains that his own reports of casualties—if they err at all—err on the side of understatement. But each adds that he doesn't believe the other side for sour apples. The other side is just plain lying, if nothing worse.

Boy Talk Recalled

It all calls up memories of the bets we used to make when we were little boys with short pants and long imagination. "I'll bet a million dollars I can throw this rock over that house, and bounce it in the next block." "Over that house? I'll bet ten million you can't." "A hundred million I can!" "A billion you

Representative Albert Gore, 31, Tennessee Democrat, is pictured as he spoke against the administration's housing bill. His oration was considered an important factor in defeat of the $800,000,000 measure. There was of course, this difference. When we bet, we didn't have a penny of real money at stake. But in bleak Mongolia some good men—Providence alone knows how many—are doing bravely while Tokio and Moscow punch counting machines. Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Money Spent for Taxes Cannot Go for Wages

From the Johnston, Pa., Democrat.

Samuel B. Pettengill, a former member of the Congress who writes pieces for the city papers, declares in one of his recent articles that businessmen, including editors, have faced some pretty tough going during recent years. As Pettengill points out, business has been in the doghouse for some time. It has been burdened by punitive taxes, rising costs, competition subsidized by government, sitdowns, walkouts and general uncertainty. Small wonder, then, that business occasionally acts a bit groggy. However, notwithstanding their various handicaps, many businessmen have actually been keeping a stiff upper lip and trying to see what they could do to keep afloat and at the same time do their part in helping make the United States of America a better country in which to live and do business.

Illustrating his point, Pettengill tells a true story about a newspaper, in a town of 26,000 population and with a circulation of approximately 12,000, which has been making a valiant struggle to remain afloat. In 1929 this paper's total taxes—local, state and federal—were $1,775. Last year all taxes, including social security, amounted to $24,615. That's some jump. It is an increase in operating costs over a period of 19 years of $22,840, which represents added tax burden. The figure does not include increased costs for newsprint, labor and every other item of operation. This extra $22,840 has to come either out of profits or out of capital. If costs like that must be met by making inroads on reserve capital, bankruptcy is the inevitable outcome.

As The Democrat has pointed out week after week, month after month, year after year, for the last forty years, taxes cannot be paid after everything else. In the course of normal business operations, they come ahead of everything else. True, there are certain favored individuals—certain slickers—who manage to escape paying taxes. They, however, are the exception. Honest businessmen who do not resort to any artful dodges are compelled to pay taxes. Otherwise the taxing authorities clamp down on them.

In discussing the statement so frequently made that capital is on a sitdown strike, Pettengill goes on to say: "Put yourself in the place of the publisher whose case we have cited. Would you invest more money in the paper under those circumstances? If you were not already in the publishing business, would you start a new newspaper or buy an old one when you knew papers had been consolidating or going to the wall all over the country?"

But that isn't half of it. If you

Paul V. McNutt versus John N. Garner! Hasn't the Democratic situation shaped itself substantially to that effect? Political posters are increasingly guessing in the affirmative. If President Roosevelt decides to fight for another term, of course, that will be different. Leaving such a contingency out of consideration, however, what about the McNutt-Garner theory?

F.D.'s psychology enters into the calculation, too.

Now, it's generally recognized that the present White House tenant, even if he doesn't choose to run again, wants to deflate Garner's incipient boom. Isn't it possible that he can so utilize McNutt's chances so as to deflate it?

These questions have to be asked in order to present the problem in its entirety.

Third Term Prospects? Garner doesn't care whether F. D. chooses to run again or not. It's to be taken for granted that he wants to be nominated, regardless of the "boss" wishes as to his own future. Maybe the chief executive resents this attitude on the part of his understudy.

McNutt says that he's out of the 1940 picture, on the supposition that the boss is a would-be third term. That's a submissive attitude of which the president presumably may be taken to be appreciative.

Garner's a practically avowed anti-New Dealer. Though perchance F. D. doesn't desire another four years in the executive mansion, he certainly doesn't want an "anti" to succeed him. So he's against the Texan, any way the matter's looked at.

McNutt hasn't a rampant New Deal record. In fact, some of his critics call him a Fascist. Still, he's more or less amenable. Were F. D. in a position to nominate a 100 per center, I've no doubt he'd prefer one to the Hoosier. But his 100 per centers haven't turned out very promisingly, and Paul V. assuredly is more pleasing to him than Garner is.

McNutt's Qualifications Well, Paul turned up from the Philippines to ask the White House what about himself.

It's a safe bet that he put the third term inquiry. It's an equally safe bet that the president, not having made up his own mind on the subject, didn't give him a yes-or-no answer.

Naturally, the president asked Paul, though, what the latter had up his sleeve. Paul, it's a cinch, replied that he had Indiana in his hip pocket, that his lieutenants had done considerable fixing in adjoining states, and that, especially, he had a pretty good lineup in Dixie. It's true that he has, I understand.

White House Reasoning White House reasoning, politicians assure me, must have been thus: "Indiana's and some more north-had a pocketful of money, would you go into any new business today in the face of the rising tide of taxes and operating costs? If you would, what business? There is a lot of idle money around which would be glad to "take a flier" if there was any certainty there were investments to be found which could be reasonably expected to pay even four percent.

ern Democratic convention votes are worth having.

"Dixie's a brother to us. It's an anti-New Dealerish section essentially, in states like Carter Glass, Senator George's and Senator Bailey's. It's a Garner realm which McNutt offers us a chance to break into."

"If Garner wins we lose out completely."

"If McNutt wins with our help, he'll be grateful, and maybe he won't win. Maybe F. D.'ll get a third nomination and McNutt'll be grateful to us with 1944 in view."

"Accordingly, let's give him the social security chairmanship—to cinch him, either way."

All this is pure guesswork.

But it's guessing by competent politicians.

It's hard to tell which, by wishful wishing, is doing its side's most intelligent wishing.

From the Christian Science Monitor

Rejection of the Roosevelt lending-spending bill by the House of Representatives is a turning point in current American history. Clearcut and decisive, the action has two major meanings, the first primarily political, the second economic.

Politically it is the sharpest rebuff the president has encountered in Congress. He has been defeated more than once on specific projects such as the court plan or the original reorganization bill. But never before has Congress so completely and confidently torpedoed a major administration program. And this revolt came over the type of legislation which has been most tempting—projects to spend money, so framed that every member would find many of his constituents eager to have federal funds flow into their particular business or locality.

That Congress—which at times has so far lost a legislature's usual functions as to favor spending which the executive opposed—could refuse this alluring program is evidence of a vital political change. Probably the usual difficulties of a president's second term and the revolt of one section of his own party will be employed to explain what happened. But the action looks like more than that; it looks like the reflection of a new attitude among the people.

We have a distinct impression that economy has become popular that the people are weary of pump-priming. If so there will be no revival of that project next year when spending was expected to be a major influence on the elections. More than that, it will mean that Congress has regained the power of the purse, with the people and their representatives more interested in checking than fostering expenditures. Such a development would be far more important than any personal rebuff to the President or any partisan hopes for next year.

The second meaning of the action is that Congress has rejected the whole theory of "federal investment" as it has been recently presented. Pump-priming was the earlier name. But pump-priming originally accepted as an emergency measure had become a habit. The priming didn't last, now the pump has broken down.

Failure Bluff Is A Quaint Conceit

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, D. C., Aug. 7.—Washington is witnessing a new stunt of pre-campaign jockeying.

When congressional rebels vote against an administration measure and it fails, a prediction is made that the failure will prevent recovery or bring a recession. The dissenting culprits must be publicized so that they may not escape the people's wrath in the coming elections. This trick has not been used against a man who killed the spending bill. It was tried also against those who voted against the un-neutrality bill.

It is a quaint but clever conceit. It is surefire and double-action. Recovery does not come or recession does, there are the scape-goats, tagged and indicted in advance. This is supposed to be big medicine politically. If recovery does come, we shall be too happy to think about these dire forebodings and the lawmakers will get the benefit of a rising market for the elections. The will say, as always, "we planned that way."

FDR Used It First

Mr. Roosevelt used this nifty art when Congress refused to pass the arms embargo. He suggested that this action had killed a nice big market boom. It did him no harm when the market promptly spurred. People felt too good about the rise.

He used it again after his spending defeat. That time he made some remarkable assertions—that the money would have begun activating business within a couple of months, and would eventually directly or indirectly employ seven million men—lost benefits for which the economy boys must take the blame in 1940. These were all possibilities but will serve their purpose even better than truth if business drops again.

Wallace Next

Then Mr. Wallace cracked down more bitterly than his boss, Paul, to give him one hundred million dollars to lend farmers against crops, would cost the farmers the difference between fifty-five cents and twenty-five cents a bushel for corn, for example. Crop prices would drop to depression levels. One whole economic structure would feel the terrible impact of the loss of literal millions of purchasing power—who would be to blame? Members of Congress who did not vote millions to save billions. Let names be bared and blazoned to the anger of the voters—unless they are the light and reconsider their action.

Farmers in a Fix

There isn't any doubt that farmers are in fix between growing surplus and prices artificially pegged at a point so high that they are destroying their markets and accelerating their disaster far beyond the point where a few score millions of spending money can save them. But who got them in that fix? The rebel economy-minded legislators—except as they may previously have permitted Mr. Wallace to similar ghost-raising, to build their votes for ruinous proposals.

The policies of the department of Agriculture, hitherto rubber-stamped by Congress got them there. Mr. Wallace has become the most prodigal spender of all the reckless crew and has produced a worst result. At least, Secretary Ickes and Hopkins bought some useful public works. All Mr. Wallace has bought is an increased market and an unmanageable surplus. The money spent—gone forever, sunk without a trace.

Politics at Its Worst

This whole double-action strategy of predicting catastrophe and stigmatizing the culprits is possibly the ugliest politics, but it is politics at its worst. It is combined with hunting, blame-shifting, buck-passing, possible misrepresentation, emptied coercion, and present block strong-arming. Nevertheless for reasons stated in the beginning it is very clever and there is nothing we can do about it but wait its results with interest. If recovery comes to refute these bleak beating prophets of disaster, it can forget them and their work as just a few more unlovely platitudes of this long and hideous nightmare of depression.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

End of an Era

CITING fourteen specific accomplishments by Republicans in co-operation with the real Democrats in the fight to save America from the New Deal, Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, Republican leader in the House of Representatives, declares that the "era of rash and reckless experimentation is ended" and that "America is again seeking the paths of orderly progress under law."

Martin is quite right about that and big encouragement has been given everybody by the achievement. As heretofore noted in these columns, and as Representative Martin says, business confidence began to show some signs of revival in proportion as the Congress reasserted its legislative independence. The only obstacles standing today in the path of a solid and sustained business recovery are the administrative confusions and failures of the so-called New Deal.

The fourteen specific accomplishments listed by Martin are the step taken toward economy and common sense in federal finances, refusal to lift the debt limit, refusal to pledge American involvement in European power politics, a forced measure of tax revision, revision of the Social Security program, limitation of subsidized government competition with private enterprise, reform in the vicious manipulation of WPA work-relief, adoption of the Hatch bill, strengthened deportation laws, restoration of checks and balances in the government reorganization bill, probe of the Labor board, investigation of the so-called reciprocal trade treaty program, a hard fight to re-establish the Republican principle of sound money and a step toward curtailment of the so-called "emergency" powers of the executive.

As Martin says, in reviewing the work of the session, the Republican minority faithfully kept its pledge to work constructively and not be simply a party of criticism, having fought for economy and sanity in government and yet not hesitating to support sound measures brought forth by Democrats. Moreover, encouraged by growing popular support of this course, the Republicans are pledged by Martin to continue this fight for fundamental Americanism and to battle the New Deal socialism at every step within and without the Congress.

"The people of the United States are tired of hit-or-miss government," Martin rightly declares. They want "to get out of the red and back to work." They want "to try honest book-keeping, honest politics and honest Americanism for a change."

They certainly do.

Nobody can dispute these sorry facts. It is high time to change all of them for the better. The Congress has made a splendid start in that direction. Members are returning home to ascertain the sentiment of their constituents. It is the duty of the people now to let the members know how they feel about this awful record and to encourage their legislative representatives to continue the work of correction and reform.

Everybody Pays Taxes

CERTAINLY everybody pays taxes.

Take a new dress as an example. Alfred C. Frodel, eminent tax attorney and consultant, has revealed in a study that in the manufacture and sale of a dress there are 125 taxes paid from the cotton grower to the retailer!

Mr. Frodel says there are nine taxes paid by the cotton grower, 12 by the cotton ginner, 16 by the transportation companies, 14 by the cotton mill, 14 by the bleachers and dyers, 14 by the button and trimming manufacturers, 14 by the dress manufacturer, 16 by dress wholesalers, and 16 taxes paid by the retailer!

These taxes are passed along in the price of the dress. In the end you, who think you pay no tax, foot the bill for a part of these taxes, necessarily tacked on as a legitimate part of the cost of the manufacture of the dress. This extra money goes to pay New Deal bills.

In short, out of every dollar you put into the price of the dress, fifteen cents is taken in taxes to pay the government's debts.

Certainly everybody pays!

Canada's Telephones

CANADA is second only to the United States in the number of telephones per capita, the figure being 13.7 telephones per 100 of population in the United States, against 11.5 in Canada, says Canada's Weekly. This is a high figure when it is borne in mind that Canada has a low density of population and that about forty-six per cent of this population is rural.

The only countries having a greater total number of telephones are the United States, Germany, Great Britain and France.

The telephone industry in Canada enjoyed a steady growth up to 1930, when a peak figure of slightly over 1,400,000 telephones was recorded. There was a substantial decrease in the following three years, the figure for 1933 being approximately 1,190,000. Since 1933 almost two-thirds of this loss has been recovered, the number of telephones at the end of 1937 being around 1,320,000.

Annual Advice on Tree-Planting

By MARSHALL MASLIN

If you're planning a garden, plant an oak! Don't say: "But oaks grow so slowly, I want trees that will make a showing right away."

Don't worry about that—oaks grow much faster than you think. Before you know it almost an oak will be towering above your head.

Plant other things, too, but be sure to plant an oak. Plant an acacia. It will grow swiftly, if you do not live in too cold a climate, and make yellow bloom in the spring. Plant yarrow by a wall, plant hollyhocks that climb toward the sky in a season, plant roses that climb and adorn a wall and shower you with petals. Plant dahlias that die down each year, plant primrose that wears itself out in the making of beauty, plant that leggy butterfly bush that fills a corner in a year, plant petunias and tulips and gladioli and all those other flowers that make a riot of color in your garden. Plant little things that delicately grow close to the crevices of a rock.

But plant an oak. It has small leaves. You will not notice its flowers. The bees will not swarm about it. Even the birds will not nest in it at first. It will not in its youth, make much of a show. But it will last!

It will not die down in a season. It will anchor itself deep in your earth and make plans for a long stay. And you will say to yourself: "This tree will last longer on this earth than I ever shall. It will make a shade when I am gone. And though people will never wonder who planted that tree, they will admire the noble fellow and be grateful for its company."

Plant an oak in yourself. Live lightly, do foolish things, waste some of your time extravagantly. Don't be so solemn. Don't imagine that everything you do or say is important. Drop that black disguise of dignity and decorum and be the Genial Idiot you'd like to be. But somewhere in your changing heart, Plant an Oak.

Take one corner of yourself seriously. Guard one part. Decide that this one thing in life is important and worth protecting. . . . I don't know what that one thing is for you, I'm not saying what it is for me—but I know that it exists and is an oak that will survive and shelter your life when all the light things and the trivial interests have gone back to nothingness again.

You'll not be sorry that you planted an oak!

EDWIN C. HILL

Japan and Russia report some mighty good shooting from the desolate, battle-torn frontier between Manchukuo and Outer Mongolia.

No war has been declared, but an admitted difference of opinion exists and this has led to a quality of aerial gun-play that would have made Wyatt Earp or Wild Bill Hickok proud as Punch if they had fought in combat planes instead of on cayuses.

Japan's side of the argument seems to be that Russia is moving in without so much as a Muscovite "Please!" Russia's side is that Japan is spraddling over more territory than a big dog in a very little manger.

Both sides have gone into the air higher than kites and the resulting casualties, reported, are startling. Occidental aviation experts, airmen are being shot down like sitting ducks. Like flies! The gunning of the Lafayette Escadrille back in 1917 and 1918 was only pea-shooting by comparison. Richtofen's Flying Circus was a complete misfire.

Japan in First

Japan got in the first lick on May 28 with word of seventeen Soviet planes downed. Two days later she reported thirty more. Then on June 23 a score of her ships engaged 150 Russians and bagged 49. Next day they bagged twelve more.

The sleepy Russian giant woke up about this time and on the same day announced that her fliers had brought down twenty-five Japanese planes. Japan countered on June 26 with a bag of ninety-eight. Next day Russia claimed another twenty-five against only six claimed by Japan. This excellent score, however, took most of the tuck out of the Russian fliers and for almost a month they didn't pull a trigger, so far as any official communique went.

Claiming Everything

Meanwhile Japan was claiming everything in sight. On July 5, fifty Russian planes; on July 10, fifty-nine more, and on July 24 another fifty-eight. Russia didn't file another entry until July 25. Then, however, she made up for lost time. On that day she said fifty-eight Japanese planes had been dropped.

Old Cleobulus might have judged so much destruction a bit extreme. That great sage of Ancient Greece had the reasonable notion that excesses ought to be avoided. Neither Japan nor Russia, however, seems ever to have heard of him, nor of little Jean Francois La Harpe, who warned in one of his plodding Parisian plays that "We always weaken where we exaggerate."

All Records Broken

No one in Tokio has conceded any exaggeration at all. Barring exaggeration there isn't a military flyer in this country who will deny that each side has broken all existing records for bullet's-eye shooting. The score is so good that the experts are flabbergasted. They don't understand how so many planes can be maintained in such a desolate region. For their own part, they admit, they couldn't keep 266 ships fit for fighting in any airport around New York, with all its resources.

As a matter of fact the Russians and Japanese are flabbergasted, too. They can't understand, either, how the other fellow does it. Each earnestly explains that his own reports of casualties—if they err at all—err on the side of understatement. But each admits that he doesn't believe the other side for sour apples. The other side is just plain lying, if nothing worse.

Boy Talk Recalled

It all calls up memories of the bets we used to make when we were little boys with short pants and long imagination. "I'll bet a million dollars I can throw this rock over that house, and bounce it in the next block." "Over that house? I'll bet ten million you can't." "A hundred million I can't." "A billion you

AIDS HOUSING DEFEAT

As The Democrat has pointed out week after week, month after month, year after year, for the last forty years, taxes cannot be paid after everything else. In the course of normal business operations, they come ahead of everything else. True, there are certain favored individuals—certain slickers—who manage to escape paying taxes. They, however, are the exception. Honest businessmen who do not resort to any artful dodges are compelled to pay taxes. Otherwise the taxing authorities clamp down on them.

In discussing the statement so frequently made that capital is on a sidown strike, Pettengill goes on to say:

"Put yourself in the place of the publisher whose case we have cited. Would you invest more money in the paper under those circumstances? If you were not already in the publishing business, would you start a new newspaper or buy an old one when you knew papers had been consolidating or going to the wall all over the country?"

Representative Albert Gore, Tennessee Democrat, is pictured as he spoke against the administration's housing bill. His oration was considered an important factor in defeat of the $800,000,000 measure. Gore, in his maiden speech, denied projects would be self-liquidating and charged subsidies would boost cost to $4,860,000,000.

Garner versus McNutt Contest Seen If F.D.R. Does Not Seek a Third Term

By CHARLES P. STEWART Central Press Columnist

Paul V. McNutt versus John N. Garner! Hasn't the Democratic situation shaped itself substantially to that effect? Political dopsters are increasingly guessing in the affirmative. If President Roosevelt decides to fight for another term, of course, that will be different. Leaving such a contingency out of consideration, however, what about the McNutt - Garner

John N. Garner?

P. D.'s psychology enters into the calculation, too.

Now, it's generally recognized that the present White House tenant, even if he doesn't choose to run again, wants to deflate Garner's incipient boom. Isn't it possible that he can so utilize McNutt's chances so as to deflate it?

Money Spent for Taxes Cannot Go for Wages

From the Johnstown, Pa., Democrat.

Samuel B. Pettengill, a former member of the Congress who writes pieces for the city papers, declares in one of his recent articles that businessmen, including editors, have faced some pretty tough going during recent years. As Pettengill points out, business has been in the pinches for some time. It has been burdened by punitive taxes, rising costs, competition subsidized by government, sitdowns, walkouts and general uncertainty. Small wonder, then, that business occasionally acts a bit groggy. However, notwithstanding their various handicaps, many businessmen have actually been keeping a stiff upper lip and trying to see what they could do to keep afloat and at the same time do their part in helping make the United States of America a better country in which to live and do business.

Illustrating his point, Pettengill tells a true story about a newspaper in a town of 26,000 population and with a circulation of approximately 12,000, which has been making a valiant struggle to remain afloat. In 1929 this paper's total taxes—local, state and federal—were $1,775. Last year all taxes, including social security, amounted to $24,615. That's some jump. It is an increase in operating costs over a period of 19 years of $22,840, which represents added tax burden. The figure does not include increased costs for newsprint, labor and every other item of operation. This extra $22,840 has to come either out of profits or out of capital. If costs like that must be met by making inroads on reserve capital, bankruptcy is the inevitable outcome.

As The Democrat has pointed out week after week, month after month, year after year, for the last forty years, taxes cannot be paid after everything else. In the course of normal business operations, they come ahead of everything else. True, there are certain favored individuals—certain slickers—who manage to escape paying taxes. They, however, are the exception. Honest businessmen who do not resort to any artful dodges are compelled to pay taxes. Otherwise the taxing authorities clamp down on them.

McNutt's Qualifications

Well, Paul turned up from the Philippines to ask the White House what about himself.

It's a safe bet that he put the third term inquiry. It's an equally safe bet that the president, not having made up his own mind on the subject, didn't give him a yes-or-no answer.

Naturally, the president asked Paul, though, what the latter had up his sleeve. Paul, it's a cinch, replied that he had Indiana in his hip pocket, that his lieutenants had done considerable fixing in adjoining states, and that, especially, he had a pretty good lineup in Dixie. It's true that he has, I understand.

White House Reasoning

White House reasoning, politicians assure me, must have been this:

"Indiana's and some more northern Democratic convention votes are worth having.

"Dixie's a brother to us. It's an anti-New Dealerish section essentially, in states like Carter Class' Senator George's and Senator Bailey's. It's a Garner realm which McNutt offers us a chance to break into."

"If Garner wins we lose out completely."

"If McNutt wins with our help, he'll be grateful, and maybe he won't win. Maybe P. D.'ll get a third nomination and McNutt'll be grateful to us with 1944 in view."

"Accordingly, let's give him the social security chairmanship—to cinch him, either way."

All this is pure guesswork. But it's guessing by competent politicians.

From the Christian Science Monitor

Rejection of the Roosevelt lending-spending bill by the House of Representatives is a turning point in current American history. Clear-cut and decisive, the action has two major meanings, the first primarily political, the second economic.

Politically it is the sharpest rebuff the president has encountered in Congress. He has been defeated more than once on specific projects such as the court plan or the original reorganization bill. But never before has Congress so completely and confidently torpedoed a major administration program. And this revolt came over the type of legislation which has been most tempting—projects to spend money, so framed that every member would find many of his constituents eager to have federal funds flow into their particular business or locality.

That Congress—which at times has so far lost a legislature's usual functions as to favor spending which the executive opposed—could refuse this alluring program is evidence of a vital political change. Probably the usual difficulties of a president's second term and the revolt of one section of his own party will be employed to explain what happened. But the action looks like more than that; it looks like the reflection of a new attitude among the people.

We have a distinct impression that economy has become popular that the people are weary of pump-priming. If so there will be no revival of that project next year when spending was expected to be a major influence on the elections. More than that, it will mean that Congress has regained the power of the purse, with the people and their representatives more interested in checking than fostering expenditures. Such a development would be far more important than any personal rebuff to the President or any partisan hopes for next year.

The second meaning of the action is that Congress has rejected the whole theory of "federal investment" as it has been recently presented. Pump-priming was the earlier name. But pump-priming originally accepted as an emergency measure had become a habit. The priming didn't last, now the pump was broken down.

Failure Bluff Is A Quaint Conceit

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, D. C., Aug. 7.—Washington is witnessing a new stunt of pre-campaign jockeying. When a congressional rebel votes against an administration measure and it fails, a prediction is made that the failure will prevent recovery or bring a recession. The dis-senting culprits must be publicized so that they may not escape the people's wrath in the coming elections. This trick has not been used against who killed the spending bill and it was tried also against those who voted against the un-neutrality bill.

It is a quaint but clever conceit. It is surefire and double-action. recovery does not come or recession does, there are the scape-goats, tagged and indicted in advance. This supposed to be big medicine politically. If recovery does come, these dire forebodings and the leaders who voted against the bill will be blamed for the failure of the recovery. If recession comes, they will be blamed for the failure of the recovery.

Mr. Roosevelt used this nifty line when Congress refused to lift the arms embargo. He suggested that this action had killed a nice little market boom. It did him no harm when the market promptly spurted. People felt too good about the rise.

He used it again after his spending defeat. That time he made some remarkable assertions—that the money would have begun activating business within a couple of months, and would eventually directly or indirectly employ seven million men—lost benefits for which the economy boys must take the blame in 1940. These were all possibilities but will serve their purpose even better than truth if business drops again.

FDR Used It First

These were all possibilities but will serve their purpose even better than truth if business drops again.

Wallace Next

Then Mr. Wallace cracked down more bitterly than his boss. He sure to give him one hundred million dollars to lend farmers against crops, would cost the farmers the difference between five cents and twenty-five cents a bushel for corn, for example. If prices would drop to depression-level lows. Our whole economic structure would feel the impact of the loss of literal millions of purchasing power—who would be to blame? Members of Congress who did not vote billions to save billions. Let names be bared and blazoned to the light and reconsider their action.

Farmers in a Fix

There isn't any doubt that farmers are in fix between growing surplus and prices artificially pegged at a point so high that it is destroying their markets and so on. But who got them in that fix? The rebel economy-minded legislators—except as they may previously have permitted Mr. Wallace, a similar ghost-raising, to build their votes for ruinous proposals. The policies of the department of Agriculture hitherto rubber-stamped by Congress got them there. Mr. Wallace has become the most prodigal spender of all reckless crew and has produced the worst result. At least, Secretary Tamm and Hopkins bought some of the public works. All Mr. Wallace has bought is an increased market and an unmanageable surplus. The money spent gone forever, sunk without a trace.

Politics at Its Worst

This whole double-action strategy of predicting catastrophe and dramatizing the culprits is possibly the most grotesque thing in politics at its worst. It is combined with hunting, blame-shifting, buck-passing, possible misrepresentation, attempted coercion, and present block strong-arming. Nevertheless for reasons stated in the beginning it is very clever and there is nothing we can do about it but wait its results with interest. If recovery comes to refute these dire beating prophets of disaster, we can forget them and their victims of this long and hideous United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

One Should Seek Community from Poisoning by Ivy

Washing with Solution Is Recommended As Good Remedy

eruption of poison ivy or oak, once seen or experienced, can never be forgotten. The blistering appearance of the skin as bad as it feels.

When the eruption has actually started, its treatment is most satisfactory. The fact that in Macdonald's book on "Ivy Dermatitis" he gives pages of various remedies for this. It is a pretty good idea when there are more than one sure-fire remedies for any one of them is very good.

One recommended is first to wash the skin affected with benzine, or other soap. Since the poison is an oil, cardol, it is best dissolved in one of these substances.

Then the local applications to relieve discomfort, the best is carbolic acid and mentholated calamine lotion.

tion. Cold water is almost as good; in fact, when the discomfort becomes almost intolerable it may work best.

Prevention Important

Prevention, then, assumes most importance. We have showed there is proof of the fact that only about one-third of all people are highly susceptible. These can be detected by the application of the virus to the unbroken skin. This fact is extremely important, because military encampments, scout camps, etc., have been entirely disrupted by severe epidemics of rhus poisoning.

In 1916 Duncan first advocated the ancient folk remedy of chewing the leaves of the plant, but this causes too violent stomach upset. This was improved by using an alcoholic extract of the leaves. Preparations of this kind can be obtained from pharmacists. I have heard the personal testimony of a number of people to the effectiveness of this method of prevention.

One woman who wanted to accompany her husband on hiking and hunting trips used to suffer tortures, so that for several years she desisted. After using an extract by mouth she was able to go into the woods and even deliberately expose herself to the plant without any ill effects. But, in general, the testimony is against the effectiveness of these oral administrations.

Preventive Methods

Maisel advocates the use of a bath in which about four drops of the extract is placed in ten gallons of water, and this amount gradually increased. This might be valuable in selected cases, as for instance, one of his—a Boy Scout leader who had an attack every time he went with his troop, and who found no relief in injections.

Injection under the skin of the extract dissolved in olive oil has proved much more generally successful. The injections are painless. One is given once a week for four weeks. No bad reactions are reported.

The extract is also used in treatment after eruption has occurred. One injection is made every twenty-four hours until symptoms abate. Reports say that after the first injection marked improvement is usually noted. After the third or fourth treatment, inflammation, pain and itching entirely subside.

Spraying the Plants

Poison ivy and oak can be destroyed in your garden by spraying the plant with a strong solution of common salt in soapy water or kerosene. This spraying is an improvement on pulling them up, especially if the puller-upper is an unsuspected susceptible.

Questions and Answers

J. L. P.: "I have never seen any discussion by you of lymphatic leukemia. Can you tell me where I can get any information about this?"

Answer—The medical man does not know very much about lymphatic leukemia. All the available information about it will be found in any comprehensive encyclopedia.

F. R.: "What is potassium used for as a medicine? What is bromide used for as a medicine? Are ironized yeast tablets good for people who have high blood pressure?"

Answer—Potassium alone is not used in medicine. Many potassium salts are used, as potassium iodide, potassium bromide, potassium citrate and potassium acetate. Bromides are used in medicine as sedatives, particularly for epilepsy. Ironized yeast will not help high blood pressure unless anemia is also present.

Paring Harmless

M. T.: "How can I become permanently rid of corns? I have been paring them for about three months. Should I stop this practice?"

Answer—Corns are almost invariably caused by bad-fitting shoes or thin stockings or a combination. Paring does no harm.

L. R.: "I have had a tooth removed from the lower side of the mouth. I would like to know if it would benefit me by having a new tooth put in?"

Answer—Yes. The loss of the tooth weakens the entire arch of the jaw and endangers other teeth.

Kids Learn About Sex from a Rabbit

Molly White Rabbit, her children (kept warm in cotton) and kindergarten class

By The AP Feature Service

New York.—When the summer session of Teachers College kindergarten demonstration school opened, the 16 pupils aged 4 to 6, found a white rabbit comfortably caged in the middle of the room.

"That's Molly," the teacher, Miss Ruth C. Gamble, told the youngsters. Then she added, quite casually, "Molly is going to have a baby."

And with that start, the children began to learn the facts of life from a rabbit. Daily, they fed the prospective mother, gave her water, cleaned her cage. Daily they'd ask questions.

"I gave them the truth and tried to tell them no more than they wanted to know," says Miss Gamble. "They were all eager to learn."

Youth In The News—Little Britons Bend Their Knees

WE WISH we'd had these pictures before the King and Queen visited America, for curtsying is an old subject now. But these new examples of it are kind of cute.

about it, and accepted the answers as natural truth.

Then the first baby arrived. "A hot dog with a mouth," one of the little students described it.

Next, some more questions. "Did it come out of an egg?" "Why isn't the father here?" "Was it warm inside its mother?"

Soon the children were allowed to feed the infants—there are nine in all—out of a doll's nursing bottle.

The class is a regular course in progressive education, which mothers of the children can attend.

"When children go to school, they learn about sex from outside sources, anyhow," says one mother. "I think it is much better for them to learn about it in a natural manner, because it makes a more beautiful impression on them."

"Sex is a part of normal life. For children to be brought into contact with the manifestations of sex in a perfectly normal way . . . takes from sex education those characteristics which used to be bad, and gives the children knowledge and information of the best possible kind. In the modern school, this type of sex education should begin in the kindergarten and continue through high school."

AFL Convention Opens in Wheeling

Wheeling, W. Va., Aug. 7 (AP)—A message from headquarters, possibly about what the AFL intends to do about the CIO drive to organize the building trades, was in the making tonight for the delegates to the convention of the State Federation of Labor (AFL).

Francis J. Dillon, personal representative of President William Green of the AFL, purposely postponed a scheduled address, announcing there may be some things developing in Atlantic City about which he would like to talk.

Dillon, who reorganized the federation more than a year ago after the CIO unions formed the State Industrial Union Council, said he intended to hold a telephone conference with Green tonight.

The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor is meeting in Atlantic City and among the items listed for discussion is "the CIO threat to invade and raid the Building Trades Unions of the AFL and the effects of such a drive on the prospects for labor peace."

From Green came a telegram lauding the State Federations as

"defenders of the American Federation and the principles it has followed more than sixty years."

He said "I have assigned organizer Francis Dillon to address your convention as the representative of the American Federation."

Should Seek Community from Poisoning by Ivy

eruption of poison ivy or oak, once seen or experienced, can never be forgotten. The blistery appearance of the looks as bad as it feels.

When the eruption has actually started, its treatment is most unsatisfactory. The fact that in Macleod's book on "Ivy Dermatitis" he gives pages of vaunted remedies. It is a pretty good idea when there are more than one remedy for any one of them is very good.

It is recommended to first to the skin affected with benzine, or ether soap. Since the poisoning, cardol, it is best to use one of these substances.

For the local applications to reduce discomfort, the best is carbolic acid and mentholated calamine lo-

Prevention Important
Prevention, then, assumes most importance. We have showed there is proof of the fact that only about one-third of all people are highly susceptible. These can be detected by the application of the virus to the unbroken skin. This fact is extremely important, because military encampments, scout camps, etc., have been entirely disrupted by severe epidemics of this poisoning.

In 1916 Duncan first advocated the ancient folk remedy of chewing the leaves of the plant, but this causes too violent stomach upset. This was improved by using an alcoholic extract of the leaves. Preparations of this kind can be obtained from pharmacists. I have heard the personal testimony of a number of people to the effectiveness of this method of prevention.

One woman who wanted to accompany her husband on hiking and hunting trips used to suffer tortures, so that for several years she desisted. After using an extract by mouth she was able to go into the woods and even deliberately expose herself to the plant without any ill effects. But, in general, the testimony is against the effectiveness of these oral administrations.

Preventive Methods
Maisei advocates the use of a bath in which about four drops of the extract is placed in ten gallons of water, and this amount gradually increased. This might be valuable in selected cases, as for instance, one of his—a Boy Scout leader who had an attack every time he went with his troop, and who found no relief in injections.

Injection under the skin of the extract dissolved in olive oil has proved much more generally successful. The injections are painless. One is given once a week for four weeks. No bad reactions are reported.

The extract is also used in treatment after eruption has occurred. One injection is made every twenty-four hours until symptoms abate. Reports say that after the first injection marked improvement is usually noted. After the third or fourth treatment, inflammation, pain and itching entirely subside.

Spraying the Plants
Poison ivy and oak can be destroyed in your garden by spraying the plant with a strong solution of common salt in soapy water or kerosene. This spraying is an improvement on pulling them up, especially if the puller-upper is an unsuspected susceptible.

Questions and Answers
J. L. P.: "I have never seen any discussion by you of lymphatic leukemia. Can you tell me where I can get any information about this?"

Answer—The medical man does not know very much about lymphatic leukemia. All the available information about it will be found in any comprehensive encyclopedia.

P. R.: "What is potassium used for as a medicine? What is bromide used for as a medicine? Are ironized yeast tablets good for people who have high blood pressure?"

Answer—Potassium alone is not used in medicine. Many potassium salts are used, as potassium iodide, potassium bromide, potassium citrate and potassium acetate. Bromides are used in medicine as sedatives, particularly for epilepsy. Ironized yeast will not help high blood pressure unless anemia is also present.

Paring Harmless
M. T.: "How can I become permanently rid of corns? I have been paring them for about three months. Should I stop this practice?"

Answer—Corns are almost invariably caused by bad-fitting shoes or thin stockings or a combination. Paring does no harm.

L. R.: "I have had a tooth removed from the lower side of the mouth. I would like to know if it would benefit me by having a new tooth put in?"

Answer—Yes. The loss of the tooth weakens the entire arch of the jaw and endangers other teeth.

Steamship Beached

Ketchikan, Alaska, Aug. 7 (AP)—Caught in treacherous Wrangell narrows, the Alaska steamship company's freighter Depere ran aground at 6:30 A. M., today on a lighthouse beacon marking Prowly Rock. Shortly afterward, Capt. Henry Burns beached the ship to prevent her from sinking. None of the 31 crew members was injured.

Kids Learn About Sex from a Rabbit

Molly White Rabbit, her children (kept warm in cotton) and kindergarten class

By The AP Feature Service
New York.—When the summer session of Teachers College kindergarten demonstration school opened, the 16 pupils aged 4 to 6, found a white rabbit comfortably caged in the middle of the room.

"That's Molly," the teacher, Miss Ruth C. Gamble, told the youngsters. Then she added, quite casually, "Molly is going to have a baby."

And with that start, the children began to learn the facts of life from a rabbit. Daily, they fed the prospective mother, gave her water, cleaned her cage. Daily they'd ask questions.

"I gave them the truth and tried to tell them no more than they wanted to know," says Miss Gamble. "They were all eager to learn."

Youth In The News—Little Britons Bend Their Knees
WE WISH we'd had these pictures before the King and Queen visited America, for curtsying is an old subject now. But these new examples of it are kind of cute.

For children to be brought into contact with the manifestations of sex in a perfectly normal way . . . takes from sex education those characteristics which used to be bad, and gives the children knowledge and information of the best possible kind. In the modern school, this type of sex education should begin in the kindergarten and continue through high school."

With little lacy hem lifted, this curly-top does a cross-legged curtsy before Her Majesty at a London garden party.

Knee goes clear to the carpet here as a healthy little Briton, unruffled and in ruffles, meets her Queen.

From the hips, a serious, silk-shirted lad in big-buckle shoes makes his bow to royalty a deep one.

A pert poke bonnet, with curls peeking out, hides the face of this eager little miss. Left hand saves the balance, right pays proper homage.

AFL Convention Opens in Wheeling

Wheeling, W. Va., Aug. 7 (AP)—A message from headquarters, possibly about what the AFL intends to do about the CIO drive to organize the building trades, was in the making tonight for the delegates to the convention of the State Federation of Labor (AFL).

Francis J. Dillon, personal representative of President William Green of the AFL, purposely postponed a scheduled address, announcing there may be some things developing in Atlantic City about which he would like to talk.

Dillon, who reorganized the federation more than a year ago after the CIO unions formed the State Industrial Union Council, said he intended to hold a telephone conference with Green tonight.

The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor is meeting in Atlantic City and among the items listed for discussion is "the CIO threat to invade and raid the Building Trades Unions of the AFL and the effects of such a drive on the prospects for labor peace."

From Green came a telegram lauding the State Federations as defenders of the American Federation and the principles it has followed more than sixty years.

He said "I have assigned organizer Francis Dillon to address your convention as the representative of the American Federation."

More than 300 labor representatives gathered in the Windsor hotel to hear President Tom Cairns of the State Federation express a hope for labor peace in West Virginia.

The police department has undergone a general shakeup since it recently passed from municipal to state control.

Police Goldfish Given a Scrubbing

Kansas City, Aug. 7 (AP)—Even the police goldfish are being cleaned up. Capt. Oscar Johnson, strolling in a little park in front of a southside station, noticed the fishpond was scummy and the fish dingy. He ordered the water changed and each fish washed in a salt solution every Saturday night.

The police department has undergone a general shakeup since it recently passed from municipal to state control.

Scientists have found that lack of vitamin A may cause eyes to become unduly sensitive to glaring lights.

Gala Opening

With 250 in attendance, the opening night of the Hawaiian Night Garden at the All Olan Country Club proved a gala event, and a full week is anticipated, with many requests for its extension during the racing period. Guests decorated with Hawaiian leis; cigar girls with their slacks and wide red sashes, complemented by the waiters with their white shirts and black sashes; plus the soft lighting effects and guitar music, proved a colorful and enchanting evening in the garden of palms. The handsome Bob Bruce as master of ceremonies introduced the floor shows, which featured a toe dancer with her dance of seven veils; a hula dancer, a hula player, a tap dancer and an accordionist.

The Hawaiian Night Garden will be open to the public throughout this week. There is no cover charge. Many guests have made reservations for dinner parties and breakfasts for which special rates are being made throughout the racing period.

Sleep for Beauty!

PATRICIA ELLIS... whose bright eyes prove she knows the beauty value of healthful sleep.

By HELEN FOLLETT

GIRLS SPEND time, money and toil in their quest for good looks. It is a worthy cause and we're for it. They overlook the greatest factor of all, which is restful sleep and plenty of it. Dragging yourself to bed is something you do when you can't go places. Late hours are responsible for dull eyes, lagging footsteps, jumpy nervous systems and pale complexions.

Fatigue Lessens Charm One's elements of charm are weakened when one is fatigued. Fatigue produces toxins that are picked up by the blood stream and do damage to health and appearance. All right when you can have sufficient rest to make up for wear and tear.

Young women who run along in high nerve gear are particularly in need of long hours of slumber. Youth fancies it is made of wire and fiddle strings; that's a joke. Break the laws of health and something snaps some place. And the evidence shows on the countenance.

Have a comfortable bed with level mattress and small pillow. See that there is a current of air in the room.

Covering should be sufficient for comfort. Get to bed before you are completely tucked out. It is delightful to let one's mind go blank; fall into a dreamy state that comes between wakefulness and sleep.

When one is thoroughly rested, cheeks will be flushed in the morning, eyes bright; the new day looks interesting.

Skin Blemishes

If a blemish appears upon your skin in the form of a tiny blister or a red blotch that is not familiar to you, don't meddle with it. It may be the beginning of a boil or carbuncle, or some skin infection. The rule in such cases is "Keep your fingers away."

Applying some home remedy may make matters worse. Keep the skin clean with pure soap and water; do nothing else. Cold sores or fever blisters often swell to large proportions when touched with the fingers. Boils come to a head more quickly if they are covered with gauze that has been dipped in hot water. To lance them before they are ready to break is a mistake; they fill again later and there is the same trial to be borne again.

FAVORS APPRECIATED

ALL KIND favors are gratefully received at a bridge table. One of the most welcome comes when the opponents push you into a slam contract which you never would have bid except for their bidding, but which you make by virtue of the way that all the cards fit together in the actual play of the hand which develops. How often you have done the same for them—re-opening the bidding after they had passed the hand at less than a slam, with the result that they get the big slam premium which otherwise had escaped them.

Mrs. Ralph Webster Is Prize Winner At Country Club Luncheon

At the weekly bridge luncheon yesterday at the Cumberland Country Club, Mrs. Ralph Webster was the winner of the first prize.

Others present were Mrs. William A. Douglas, Mrs. Joseph Bludworth and Mrs. Walter B. Johnson.

Or. and Mrs. Walter B. Johnson, MacDonald terrace, entertained with a bridge party Saturday evening. Four tables were in play. Prizes were won by Mrs. Hodge Smith, Mrs. Richard Stitzer, Stanley Jones and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Sweeney.

Gala Opening

With 250 in attendance, the opening night of the Hawaiian Night Garden at the Ali Ghan Country Club proved a gala event, and a full week is anticipated, with many requests for its extension during the racing period. Guests decorated with Hawaiian leis; cigarette girls with their slacks and wide red sashes, complemented by the waiters with their white shirts and black sashes; plus the soft lighting effects and guitar music, proved a colorful and enchanting evening in the garden of palms. The handsome Bob Bruce as master of ceremonies introduced the floor shows, which featured a toe dancer with her dance of seven veils; a hula dancer, a banjo player, a tap dancer and an accordionist.

The Hawaiian Night Garden will be open to the public throughout this week. There is no cover charge. Many guests have made reservations for dinner parties and breakfasts for which special rates are being made throughout the racing period.

Dawson, Jr., officiating.

The attendants were Miss Marion Whalley, sister of the bridegroom, and Ralph O'Hara. The bride wore a black and white ensemble with a shoulder corsage of orchids and peach gladioli. Miss Whalley wore a navy ensemble accented with a shoulder corsage of yellow ageratum and blue violets.

Mrs. Whalley is a graduate of Allegheny high school, class of '38, and Mr. Whalley is a graduate of Penn Avenue high school, class of '34. He is an employee of the Baltimore

Sleep for Beauty!

PATRICIA ELLIS... whose bright eyes prove she knows the beauty value of healthful sleep.

By HELEN FOLLETT

GIRLS SPEND time, money and toil in their quest for good looks. It is a worthy cause and we're for it. They overlook the greatest factor of all, which is restful sleep and plenty of it. Dragging yourself to bed is something you do when you can't go places. Late hours are responsible for dull eyes, lagging footsteps, jumpy nervous systems and pale complexions.

Fatigue Lessens Charm

One's elements of charm are weakened when one is fatigued. Fatigue produces toxins that are picked up by the blood stream and do damage to health and appearance. All right when you can have sufficient rest to make up for wear and tear.

Young women who run along in high nerve gear are particularly in need of long hours of slumber. Youth fancies it is made of wire and fiddle strings; that's a joke. Break the laws of health and something snaps some place. And the evidence shows on the countenance.

Have a comfortable bed with level mattress and small pillow. See that there is a current of air in the room.

Covering should be sufficient for comfort. Get to bed before you are completely tucked out. It is delightful to let one's mind go blank; fall into a dreamy state that comes between wakefulness and sleep.

When one is thoroughly rested, cheeks will be flushed in the morning, eyes bright; the new day looks interesting.

Skin Blemishes

If a blemish appears upon your skin in the form of a tiny blister or a red blotch that is not familiar to you, don't meddle with it. It may be the beginning of a boil or carbuncle, or some skin infection. The rule in such cases is "Keep your fingers away."

Applying some home remedy may make matters worse. Keep the skin clean with pure soap and water; do nothing else. Cold sores or fever blisters often swell to large proportions when touched with the fingers.

Boils come to a head more quickly if they are covered with gauze that has been dipped in hot water. To break them before they are ready to lance is a mistake; they fill again later and there is the same trial to be borne again.

FAVORS APPRECIATED

ALL KIND favors are gratefully received at a bridge table. One of the most welcome comes when the opponents push you into a slam contract which you never would have bid except for their bidding, but which you make by virtue of the way that all the cards fit together in the actual play of the hand which develops. How often you have done the same for them—re-opening the bidding after they had passed the hand at less than a slam, with the result that they get the big slam premium which otherwise had escaped them.

Sluss Yacht Is Winner of Event At Deep Creek

Two of the three races at the Deep Creek Yacht Club were won Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. William Sluss of Frostburg, in their home-built entry, Deany II.

Deany II won the official point score race handsily from Mr. and Mrs. John B. Mordock in the Catalog II, which staged a garrison finish near the final buoy to nip second place from John B. and Freddy Steiding of Midland in their new Aloah. Fourth went to No Knock, sailed by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick M. Hodd of LaVale, newcomers to racing who have consistently improved their positions during the current season. Fifth was Robert and Harold Muma, far back from their usual position with the Libeth. Sixth was Tom Geer of Pittsburgh in Lillypop, and seventh came Mr. and Mrs. Dustin Miller in Maender.

The Deany II came right back in the race for women skippers, winning from Mrs. Howard L. Tolson, Miss Bonnie Jane Muma and Miss Betty Geer in that order.

The open race was won by Robert and Harold Muma in Libeth. John B. and Freddy Steiding finished first, but were disqualified for improper use of a paddle. Deany II was second, Mr. and Mrs. Henry K. Duke's Cape Cod Nimble third, Miss Charlotte Mirick of Washington, D. C., was fourth in Charlotte B. and Mr. and Mrs. Hodd's No Knock was fifth.

Adds New Features

Before noon comes, the MBS-chain will have a couple of features other than its regular run of programs. First at 10:45 a. m. comes what is described as a dunk by dunk report of a championship dunking of doughnuts contest.

Then at 11:15, a visit will be paid to Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, for the Delta Theta Pi centenary day exercises, speakers to include Owen D. Young and Charles P. Taft.

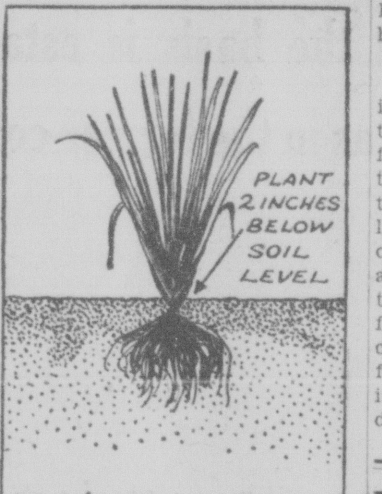

At night, the hour is 10, MBS will carry another broadcast from the national conference of Catholic charities at Denver, with Warden Thomas A. Johnston of Alcatraz prison at the microphone.

Paris Fashions

More of what Paris has to offer in the newest in fashions will be related in another overseas broadcast from that city, listed for WJZ-NBC at 2:30.

In the way of sports WJZ-NBC has a 5:05 summation of the day's play in the eastern grass courts tennis at Rye, N. Y., and Ted Husing, insisting "That's What I Said," will be put on for WABC-CBS at 6:15 the second in his new sportscasts.

Today's GARDEN-GRAPH

Proper planting of beardless Iris.

The beardless irises are very different from the bearded irises and can be handled like most perennials. They have a mass of fibrous roots instead of the horizontal rhizome.

Among the beardless irises are, the Japanese, Siberian, Spuria and our native Blue and Yellow Flags. The foliage of this group is slender and graceful.

As shown in today's Garden-Graph, the beardless irises may be planted or transplanted in either April or August. The crown should be placed about two inches below the surface of the soil. The first winter they should be mulched after the ground freezes.

As these irises are not divided for many years after planting they require a soil rich in humus and plant food. Unlike the bearded type, the beardless irises will not do well in a soil containing a great deal of lime. They seem to prefer an acid soil.

Doctor Advises Parents To Let Child Grow Up Little Ones Should Be Taught To Wait on Themselves

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Between us parents and our children goes on a continuous struggle, which few of us ever recognize. On one side are our children striving to grow up, to have power and freedom of adults; on the other, we parents are struggling no less valiantly, perhaps, to keep these children little and dependent on us for help, guidance and restraint.

Of the two contending groups, we parents are the least conscious of the prompting motives. Indeed, few of us parents even would admit that we do not want our children to grow independent. As a matter of fact, we do, theoretically; but we do not, practically.

Don't we call the child "Baby Lamb" or "Dearie" long past the time when he wishes to be so addressed? Has not almost every parent felt a pang not easily described on observing the baby's curls fall from the barber's scissors? And then, when on that first day of school the child launches forth on his great adventure, how frequently have come the words, "We don't have a baby any more!"

Creations of Habit

In spite of all the anxiety the infant's care has cost the mother, there have been compensating satisfactions for her. Her loving kindness to the baby makes her life appear the more worthwhile; nor is it merely an appearance. As the child becomes more able to care for himself, and as he wishes more to be allowed to grow independent, the parent feels his need of her decreasing. Accordingly, we parents keep on doing for the child what we had been doing for him, but what he now can do alone.

We are creatures of habit. We are more; we are creatures of emotions, too—of emotions that are tied up with the child. Besides, we dread to face the suggestion that we are no longer needed as we used to be. This same blind urge also prompts loving grandparents often to do harm to children.

Parents Still Needed

But our children need us at twelve as certainly as they need us at three; only their needs are different. As soon as they can toddle they need us to help them to more opportunities to find new experiences and more opportunities to learn how to wait upon themselves and solve their own problems.

They need us for companionship, and for guidance and advice, at times when they can profit most from such help. They need us for sympathy and affection, for listening to their troubles, and accounts of their pleasures, too.

Ocean City's Tax Rate Is Increased

Ocean City, Md., Aug. 7 (AP)—Ocean City's tax rate, which dropped to 85 cents last year, has gone back to the $1 level maintained except for last year, since 1932.

Mayor Edmund H. Johnson said increasing town expenses forced the return to the higher rate. City officials estimated municipal operations would cost about $50,000 during the next year.

tion please" broadcaster via WJZ-NBC at 7:30 Tuesday night. Thus she joins the board of experts along with Franklin P. Adams, John Kleman and Oscar Levant. Naturally, it is to be expected that some of the questions will deal with the stage.

Adds New Features

Before noon comes, the MBS-chain will have a couple of features other than its regular run of programs. First at 10:45 a. m. comes what is described as a dunky report of a championship dunking of doughnuts contest.

Then at 11:15, a visit will be paid to Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, for the Delta Theta Pi centenary day exercises, speakers to include Owen D. Young and Charles P. Taft.

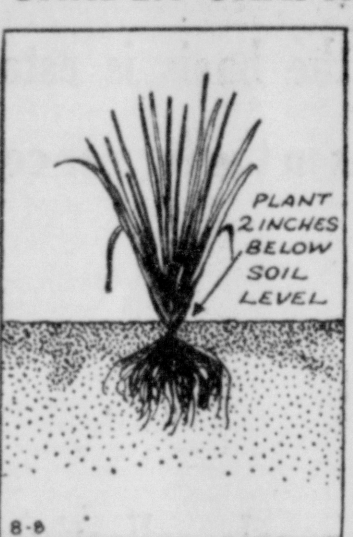

At night, the hour is 10, MBS will carry another broadcast from the national conference of Catholic charities at Denver, with Warden Thomas A. Johnston of Alcatraz prison at the microphone.

Paris Fashions

More of what Paris has to offer in the newest in fashions will be related in another overseas broadcast from that city, listed for WJZ-NBC at 2:30.

In the way of sports WJZ-NBC has a 5:05 summation of the day's play in the eastern grass courts tennis at Rye, N. Y., and Ted Husing, insisting "That's What I Said," will be put on for WABC-CBS at 6:15 the second in his new sportscasts.

Today's GARDEN-GRAPH

Proper planting of beardless Iris.

The beardless irises are very different from the bearded irises and can be handled like most perennials. They have a mass of fibrous roots instead of the horizontal rhizome.

Among the beardless irises are the Japanese, Siberian, Spuria and our native Blue and Yellow Flags. The foliage of this group is slender and graceful.

As shown in today's Garden-Graph, the beardless irises may be planted or transplanted in either April or August. The crown should be placed about two inches below the surface of the soil. The first winter they should be mulched after the ground freezes.

As these irises are not divided for many years after planting they require a soil rich in humus and plant food. Unlike the bearded type, the beardless irises will not do well in a soil containing a great deal of lime. They seem to prefer an acid soil.

Doctor Advises Parents To Let Child Grow Up Little Ones Should Be Taught To Wait on Themselves

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Between us parents and our children goes on a continuous struggle, which few of us ever recognize. On one side are our children striving to grow up, to have power and freedom of adults; on the other, we parents are struggling no less valiantly, perhaps, to keep these children little and dependent on us for help, guidance and restraint.

Of the two contending groups, we parents are the least conscious of the prompting motives. Indeed, few of us parents even would admit that we do not want our children to grow independent. As a matter of fact, we do, theoretically; but we do not, practically.

Don't we call the child "Baby Lamb" or "Dearie" long past the time when he wishes to be so addressed? Has not almost every parent felt a pang not easily described on observing the baby's curls fall from the barber's scissors? And then, when on that first day of school the child launches forth on his great adventure, how frequently have we come the words, "We don't have a baby any more!"

Creatures of Habit

In spite of all the anxiety the infant's care has cost the mother, there have been compensating satisfactions for her. Her loving kindness to the baby makes her life appear the more worthwhile; nor is it merely an appearance. As the child becomes more able to care for himself, and as he wishes more to be allowed to grow independent, the parent feels his need of her decreasing. Accordingly, we parents keep on doing for the child what we had been doing for him, but what he now can do alone.

We are creatures of habit. We are more; we are creatures of emotions, too—of emotions that are tied up with the child. Besides, we dread to face the suggestion that we are no longer needed as we used to be.

This same blind urge also prompts loving grandparents often to do harm to children.

Parents Still Needed

But our children need us at twelve as certainly as they need us at three; only their needs are different. As soon as they can toddle they need us to help them to more opportunities to find new experiences and more opportunities to learn how to wait upon themselves and solve their own problems.

They need us for companionship, and for guidance and advice, at times when they can profit most from such help. They need us for sympathy and affection, for listening to their troubles, and accounts of their pleasures, too.

The employer recognizes the union as the sole collective bargaining agency, under the terms of the National Labor Relations Act, for all of the employees in the employer's plant at Amcelle, Maryland, who are eligible for membership in the union, in regard to wages, hours and other conditions of employment.

For more than a year, efforts to settle wage questions and other points in the contract have failed because of the impossibility of agreeing on the closed shop question, and all efforts to arrive at a settlement of the many questions have been discarded, because the union after days of discussion finally comes back to this one question. If this question can be settled a contract can be made.

In this competitive business the company cannot agree to limit technological changes, nor to assume contractual obligations to transfer employees from one state to another. The company desires to give jobs to all its displaced employees and to give them preference on present work in the Cumberland plant and on future work as the plant expands. Under present conditions, there seems to be no reason whatsoever to doubt that the plant will certainly expand.

When the difficulties over the so-called recognition clause are removed, negotiations can be promptly resumed on wages and other points with some prospect of settling on a contract.

Goldberg Signs Contract with Chicago Cards

Former Pitt Back Agrees To Play Pro Football for 1939 Season

Chicago, Aug. 7 (AP)—All those headlines Marshall Goldberg earned as ace of the University of Pittsburgh football offense began paying dividends today in cash. Goldberg, who received his degree in economics from Pittsburgh this spring, signed a one-year contract with the Chicago Cardinals of the National Professional League today after several months of negotiation. His home is in Elkins, W. Va. Goldberg, powerful runner and crushing blocker, was the main cog in Pitt's running attack for three years, gaining All-America recognition his junior and senior years. Charles Bidwell, owner of the Cardinals, declined to reveal terms of the contract, but said "it called for plenty—the most I ever paid a player." The general manager said that Goldberg signed for upwards of $10,000 for the season. The 188-pound fullback left this afternoon for Duluth, Minn., where he will join the squad already in training under the direction of Head Coach Ernie Nevers. Goldberg said he had not seen many pro games, but realized he would be on the spot because of his brilliant college record. "I am sure it will be much harder to become a standout player among the pros than in the college game," he added.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 7 (AP)—The signing today of Marshall (Biggie) Goldberg, twice an All-American backfield star of the University of Pittsburgh, to play with the Chicago Cardinals of the National League, raised a delicate question of whether or not he will play in the Eastern All-Stars Charity game against the New York Giants.

Along with nine other Pitt seniors of 1938, Goldberg was supposed to play with the Easterners, who will be coached by Dr. John Bain (Jock) Sutherland, Pitt mentor who resigned several months ago. In Morgantown, W. Va., where Dr. Sutherland is aiding at a coaching school, he said:

"I am not familiar with recent developments but Marshall signed an agreement to play for the Eastern All-Stars. I don't believe he will try to cancel it. Our squad will start practice at New York Military Academy in Cornwall, N. Y., on August 20. I am sure Marshall will be with us."

Owner Charles Bidwell of the Cardinals said he was paying the greatest sum ever tendered a first-year player to Goldberg. Friends said they understood Goldberg first had asked $12,000 and had been offered $4,000 then $5,000 and finally $6,000 before today's conference. They understood he received between $10,000 and $13,000 with an understanding he would be paid only $7,500 in event he played in the Eastern game.

The Goldberg case may bring to a head a growing antagonism of National League owners toward the multitude of charity games which have sprung up in the last few years. At the recent summer meeting here they discussed the matter at length but tabled any moves for this year.

New York, Aug. 7 (AP)—Stanley Woodward, Sports Editor of the New York Herald Tribune, said tonight he "did not doubt for a moment that Marshall Goldberg would play in the All Star game."

Woodward said the paper, sponsor of the charity game, had a contract with the grid league in which it was agreed that no member of the league would attempt to dissuade any player from competing in the New York game.

"Under the circumstances, I cannot believe that owner Charles Bidwell of the Chicago Cardinals would make any such arrangements with Goldberg."

He referred to the report that Goldberg would be paid only $7,500 instead of a salary reportedly between $10,000 and $13,000 if he played in the game.

Woodward said Goldberg has signed a contract to play with the easterners.

Boy Is Drowned
Logan, W. Va., Aug. 7 (AP)—R. M. "Skipper" Parker, Jr., 7, who accompanied his father and several other men on a fishing trip, drowned last night in the Guyandotte river near Verner, twenty-five miles from Logan.

Members of the party said the boy started to wade across a "riffle" and slipped from a rock. Searchers led by the father, a Logan physician, discovered the body fifteen minutes later.

Saddle Strap Sam

Maybe my new trainer, who was a hang-over from Paddock Pete's picks on this page, did arrive last night but I missed him. As told on the preceding page, me and "Chalk Hoss Chollier" ran into Diogenes and didn't duck the old dog until dawn was breaking over the Knobley Mountains that should hide Falgout from the peering eyes of West Virginians but, instead, provide perches for the people across the Potomac.

I ain't bragging but did you notice what my plugs, Ponce Grande, Macbrille, Jest Once and Crout Au Pot did yesterday. Look 'em over in the results of yesterday's races. Me, I'm too tired for bragging after dragging Diogenes out by the Celestine last night.

If I wasn't going to be out to Faigo today I'd go to "CANDLE ENDS" in the sixth at Rockingham; "WATER CRACKER" in the fourth at Saratoga, and "SCOUT AZURE" in the sixth at Washington Park. They disqualified the latter last week for no other reason than somebody told me I had a 50¢ head end parlay riding back on it.

But today I'm being loyal and sticking to the local layout, following my chum "Chalk Hoss Chollier's" Choices at Cumberland on the preceding page. He's now my chum but what a bum he'll be if he fails me.

Americans Win Olympic Preview

As Records Fall

BY DREW MIDDLETON
London, Aug. 7 (AP)—America's hand-picked athletes followed the Herculean figure of Bill Watson and the flying feet of Clyde Jeffrey today to a notable triumph over the track and field forces of fifteen other nations in an "Olympic Preview" at the White City Stadium.

About 60,000 fans defied the raw weather and rain to see the international meet but they were rewarded. As the Americans piled up fifty-four points, thirteen of them by Watson and ten by Jeffrey, to Great Britain's forty-one, three British records were shattered and two equalled.

The lone jarring note was the loud and raucous razz handed America's Blaine Ridesout when he swung wide to pass two other runners at the start of the last lap of the mile. It was evident from the stand that Blaine had been forced wide but, probably because he was considered the cause of Sydney Wooderson's downfall at Princeton in June, he got the bird just the same.

Whatever it was, the incident had little bearing on the result of the race. Denis Pell, who has been shadowing Wooderson all season, went out like a deer on the backstretch and won comfortably in 4:15.2. Janusz Staniszewski of Poland was second and Ridesout fourth.

This victory for Britain plus B. P. McCabe's third and C. Cox's fifth put the Britons into the lead—temporarily. But George Varoff captured the pole vault with a disappointing leap of 13 feet, 6 inches. Next Watson, who had taken third in the discus, broke the British shot put record with a heave of 52 feet, 8 inches, then walked over to the broad jump and leaped 24 feet, 8 inches for his second victory. That was the ball game.

The Americans started as though the meet was being run for their benefit. Charlie Beetham, former Ohio State star, knocked off the half-mile—just striding—in 1:52.3. Then Jeffrey started his sprint double by winning the 100-yard dash in the creditable time of 9.8 seconds over a soggy track.

Disturbed at the erratic tendencies of his hurling corps, McKee and the Reds' front office negotiated purchase of John Niggeling from Indianapolis of the American Association. The deal involved two players, not designated, and a bundle of cash. The young knuckle-baller, formerly with the Boston Bees, was instructed to report to McKee in Chicago tomorrow.

McKee Has Birthday And Gets Picher from Indianapolis as Present
Cincinnati, Aug. 7 (AP)—Manager Bill McKee of the Reds was 52 years old today—and got a new pitcher and six birthday cakes to mark the occasion.

Cardinal Rookie Nearly Blind in One of His Eyes
St. Louis, Aug. 7 (AP)—Tom Sunkel, rookie southpaw pitcher of the St. Louis Cardinals, is practicing blind in one eye, but despite handicap, he recently pitched a hit game and has a 1939 record three victories and one defeat.

Traumatic cataract, suddenly coming worse from an injury, festered when he was four years, has almost totally impaired vision of Sunkel's left eye.

The condition dates back two years when Sunkel was six. The eye with a stick fired from a toy gun. A doctor managed to cut the eye, but the cataract developed, cutting his sight to little better than half normal.

Tom went ahead, played baseball and eventually became a member of the Cardinal organization. He is an excellent Minor League reeler by winning twenty games and losing only five with Atlanta last year.

There, for the first time, the cataract became worse and Sunkel's sight diminished as the season progressed. The Cardinals recalled, knowing his condition, and had him examined by eye specialists. They agreed his condition could not be corrected by an operation, such as ordinarily restores eyes of persons suffering from cataracts. Sunkel calmly accepted the fact that he would have to battle way upward with only half sight of other pitchers.

Otherwise he is splendidly equipped—6 feet 1 inch tall, 190 pounds. He will be twenty-seven years Wednesday.

"It's bothered my control a little," he said. "I have to guess where the ball is when I throw. I also have to turn my head a little more when there's a man on second base."

Ann Sheridan, O'Brien in 'Indianapolis Speedway'

The "Oomph Girl" Ann Sheridan in her zippiest role as the sweetheart of the race track in "Indianapolis Speedway," coming to the Liberty tomorrow.

With fast-talking Pat O'Brien, Ann "Oomph Girl" Sheridan, the exotic Gale Page, heart-breaker John Payne and comical Frank McHugh in the leading roles, "Indianapolis Speedway," spine tingling drama of automobile racing produced by the Warner Bros. Studio, opens tomorrow at the Liberty Theater.

Hailed as one of the most exciting and romantic films ever brought to the screen, "Indianapolis Speedway" forcefully depicts all the lure of the great American sport of auto racing on world famed tracks.

Based on a story by Howard Hawks and adapted as a screen play by Sig Herzig and Wally Klein, "Indianapolis Speedway" was directed by Lloyd Bacon. The cast, in support of the principals includes such favorites as Granville Bates, Regis Toomey, William Davidson, John Ridgeley and many others.

Of special interest to racing fans is the fact that eight well-known racing drivers appear in the film driving famed racers.

up for me. I suppose you'd call me one of those foolish women who has no interest outside her home.

My two little boys make up my entire world. I have no outside friends and interests, largely because I haven't the proper clothes in which to go out. Nothing against my character could possibly be said, and now my husband says he is going to say I am of unsound mind and take the children from me. Can this be done in a free country? I have no money to employ a lawyer.

A MOTHER.

Unless putting up with abuse past belief would convict a woman of insanity, I don't see how your husband could substantiate such a charge. Don't accept this treatment any longer. Fight to the last ditch for your children and your rights. If you have no influential friends,

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

He Cannot Take Your Children

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband's infidelities to me became the subject of conversation among the group we went with; gradually I stopped going out. I was so humiliated.

Nor did his bad treatment stop with breaking his marriage vows. He would fly into rages and beat me, and on one occasion shoved me downstairs so that I was obliged to have the doctor treat me. Being an orphan I've had no one to stand who will help you, try any or all of these agencies: Council of Social Agencies, Legal Aid Bureau, Domestic Relations Court, or the Clerk of the Court in your county.

If you belong to any church, go to your pastor. Get some women's organization like the League of Women Voters to advise you. Some men are base enough to take advantage of a woman without family or friends, fail to support her and try to take her children. While there is yet time, act.

Two Years Older—What of It?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I think something should be done legally, in there to keep away, to keep girls from like near-children. The girl to whom I am engaged and I are fellow-students in the same state university. I fell head over heels in love with her and assumed an elder brother, not to say fatherly air, protecting her from things I felt she was too immature to know about. I even made her promise not to read certain books included in one of our courses. I read the books and expounded to her.

We became engaged. She wasn't very serious at first. Now she is, and we expect to be married after we graduate in another year. As the result of her changed feelings, she has confessed to being two years older than I am. I did feel such a fool when she told me. I'm still very much in love, but a good many of my convictions seem melting like a cake of ice, forgotten, on the basement steps, with the thermometer at ninety.

SIMPLE SIMON.

If you haven't anything more to worry about than the fact your fiancée is two years older than you are, please forget it. The girl just had a sense of humor in allowing you to tell her about things when she probably knew twice as much as you did.

A Job Before Marriage?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We just about mean the world to each other, and often talk of getting married. But everytime we figure out where we're going to live, we strike a snag. He lives with his mother who owns the house, and while I like her very much she doesn't seem to like me at all.

He gives his mother so much money a week to run the house and keeps so much for himself. Do you think I ought to get myself a job, just so I would be independent, and not get in his mother's way? Eventually she will have to spend the rest of her life with us. She's a widow and very jealous of me.

J.

It seems to me it would be an excellent idea for you to get a job while waiting for your fiancée's

Selling Lowers Leading Issues In Stock Market around a Point

Trading Is Dullest of Any Session Since July 11

By VICTOR EUBANK

New York, Aug. 7 (AP)—The stock market today was the dullest of any session since July 11.

At the start the list acted as if it might be ready for an advance, but there was little through in the buying and selling for one or two supporting issues. The drift was downward.

Prices, in a number of cases, were above the day's bottoms. Offerings were light throughout. The day's turnover of 518,670 shares was the slowest for any full session since July 11. It compared with 600,000 last Friday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off 1.14 points at 49.1.

The day's news was more optimistic than otherwise, but some were said to have shelved investments on the idea an August loan crisis at least was a possibility, as Germany's military might would be at a peak around the middle of the month and expect army maneuvers of the powers might heighten tensions.

Issues cut initial losses when American Iron & Steel Institute estimated this week's mill output at 60.1 per cent of capacity, up 5.2 the week before.

Trading of the General Motors brought some demand for stock and it finished off only a few fractions to more than a point in the curb were Humble Oil, the Bond & Share, Lockheed, Aircraft and International Petroleum.

Car Hits Truck Loaded with Lions

Driver of Circus Truck Held as He Did Not Have License

Grantsville, Aug. 7.—Some of the lions belonging to the Parker circus were aroused from their meditations last night when a car crashed into the rear of the truck in which they were confined. The lions nor the occupants of the car were injured, but a board from the lions' cage caused considerable damage to the automobile. The young people in the automobile were able to remove other strips, and might have been loosened by the impact, and start looking for meat.

The accident occurred on Chestnut ridge, two miles east of here at 9 o'clock last night. The circus truck was carrying no tail lights and Robert Broadwater, driver of the car, did not see it until it was too late to avoid the collision. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hayward Broadwater. Grantsville and was driving with his father's machine. Riding in the truck were his sister, Florence Broadwater, his cousin, Robert Broadwater, Helen Miller and Helen Gnagey. It was found that Thomas C. Cooney, driver of the truck, had neglected to obtain a driver's license and he was taken to the county jail at Oakland where he was held pending a hearing before Magistrate C. S. Zeller this morning. The car was badly damaged. An official of the circus paid for the damage. The truck was not damaged.

Another accident occurred about 10 o'clock Sunday morning at the intersection of the National highway and Springs road. David Hos-

Damage to the Watson car was estimated at about $50 and no investigation was made as Hosteler agreed to take care of the matter. The latter's car was not greatly damaged.

Harry Mason Held

Constable Daniel W. Hershberger picked up Harry Mason, Bear Hill, Friday evening. Mason, who is about twenty years old, has been wanted for several weeks for fraudulently obtaining gasoline from various service stations in this and neighboring communities. The warrant was sworn out by Benjamin Kesner, Jennings. It seems Mason never allowed his gasoline tank to become completely empty and would get a few gallons at a time at some station and ask for credit for a few hours until he could get his pay check. Upon investigation it was found there was no such pay check forthcoming and Mason never returned to settle the account. A hearing was held before Magistrate C. S. Zeller Friday night, at which he was paroled to Harry Durst, of Jennings, on condition he settle all accounts fraudulently acquired. He was remanded to the county jail in Oakland until arrangements are made to pay the creditors, which so far include the Motor Service Co., Grantsville; Dixie Tavern Service Station, Little Crossings; Kesner's, Jennings; Asa Orendorf, Bittling; and Maude King, near Swanton.

Ithaca, N. Y. (AP)—Firemen blame a sparrow for a fire which broke out in a second-floor sleeping porch at the home of W. S. Wolf. They said the sparrow apparently picked up a live cigarette butt and carried it home as material for a nest it was building inside a porch partition.

ADVERTISING THAT PRODUCES CROWDS

The value of newspaper advertising has been proved so thoroughly, there is little reason for anyone doubting its superiority as the advertising medium. No other medium has crowded retail stores like newspapers. No other medium has produced as many direct sales. Even customers have learned that newspaper advertisements pull. When an ad is especially interesting, Mr. and Mrs. Shopper expect a mob, so shop early. Why experiment when you know Times-News advertising sells?

Phantom Ranch

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

SYNOPSIS
LORNA HAMILTON has come to Grantsville to visit her uncle, JERRY DALE, owner of Phantom Ranch, whose leading cowboys are SHOT ROGERS, who happened to meet Lorna at the railway station, and JERRY DALE, college-bred new-comer, who found her after three Mexicans had tried to kidnap her.

CHAPTER TEN
SHOT ROGERS, tall and rather slender, but full of masculine grace, walked from Mrs. Brazee's kitchen door with his great felt hat still held in one hand, and a very old chuckawalla dangling from the other. The lizard wriggled once, tentatively.

"Hold on, old-timer," Shot called out as he might have spoken to his horse. "No harm's coming. You got to show off a little is all."

Shot's spurs sang their clink-clink rhythm as he walked. He glanced back once at his horse hanging obediently near the front porch, reins down. But he was too busy to speak to a girl, and had his hands full; he'd just walk on. He'd let the chuckawalla against his hip to keep it soothed.

The land rise there wasn't much, but it did shield the bull pastures from view. Shot was clinking up the side of the slope when Lorna herself appeared suddenly on the rise some hundred feet away. She was alone and running.

"Hello! A bull after you?" Shot demanded. Part of his alarm was genuine.

"She stopped running. 'Oh! Oh, oh, Hello, Mr. Rogers!'"

Shot stared hard at her. Her face was pale, strained. He thought her beautiful in white. He was impressed by her brown curls.

"I brought you something—don't come too close, yet. I don't want to scare you none, Lorna. Are you—you feel all right? I mean—well, you had a little experience last night, and you ought to feel all tucked, Lorna."

"No, it isn't that. I—I feel fine. I slept all afternoon. I'm all right. What did you bring me?"

Lorna managed a smile, and so he reached the hand that had concealed the gift against his body. But he was carefully standing some eight feet away from her.

Lorna managed a smile.

and the wild monster you brought me!"

Jerry Dale came walking over the rise from the bull pastures then, walked rather slowly and wearing a grin as if in high amusement. Rogers glanced at him, then back at the girl. She centered her attention on petting and stroking the chuckawalla's rough old hide. Rogers looked quizzically at Jerry as he came up to them.

"So you can't take it, eh?" said Jerry, ignoring Shot.

"Howdy," said Shot, agreeably. "I was just showing Miss Lorna a chuckawalla. She never saw one before."

"Nuts," said Jerry. "Listen, Lorna, you don't want to fly off the handle like that. You and I are going to get along, kid! Everything's jake. No hard feelings." He looked directly at Shot Rogers then, for the first time. "Lorna and I were out for a walk together, Rogers. See?"

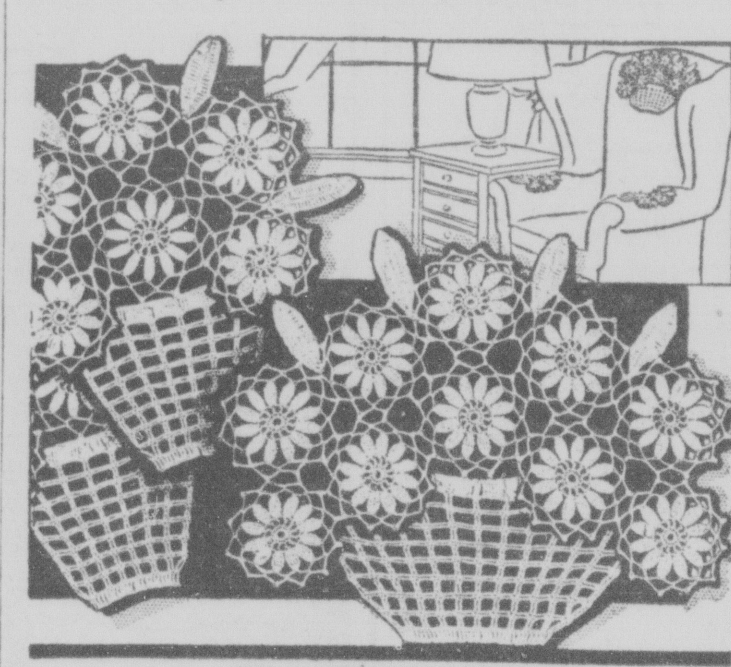

"Yes! Yes, come on!" said Lorna, hastily. "Let me carry the zoo, Mr. Rogers, and we'll walk a bit before supper." She exhaled as if in sudden relief. Her left arm held the lizard, and with her right she reached to take Shot Rogers' elbow, steering him with them slowly down the hill, pretending deep interest in the lizard.

Shot, badly confused, stalked beside her. He looked over her head at the other young man, but Jerry was scowling at Lorna and at the lizard she held. Shot didn't understand it all. He just sensed that Lorna wanted to stick with him; the determined pressure of her hand on his arm indicated that. The cowboy swallowed hard.

"It's—uh—it's—right pleasant weather hereabouts," he ventured, profoundly. "What I mean, ma'am, it's good for the stock and all, and it don't do—it doesn't do people any harm to have a cool altitude like this to work in. Gets awful hot down around Blanco and toward Tucson in summer."

"Listen, Lorna," Jerry put in, "you've got—"

The lizard wriggled once, twice, and then he spoke to a girl, and had his full; he'd just walk on. He let the chuckawalla against his hip to keep it soothed.

The land rise there wasn't much, but it did shield the bull pastures from view. Shot was clinking up the side of the slope when Lorna herself appeared suddenly on the rise, some hundred feet away. She was alone and running.

"Hello! A bull after you?" Shot barked. Part of his alarm was genuine.

She stopped running. "Oh! Oh! Hello, Mr. Rogers!"

Shot stared hard at her. Her face pale, strained. He thought her beautiful in white. He was impressed by her brown curls.

"I brought you something—don't come too close, yet. I don't want to scare you none, Lorna. Are you—you feel all right? I mean—well, you had a little experience last night, and it ought to feel all tucked, as Lorna said."

"No, it isn't that. I—I feel fine. No, I slept all afternoon. I'm all right. What did you bring me?"

She managed a smile, and so he returned the hand that had concealed a gift against his body. But he was carefully standing some eight feet away from her.

"Why—what in the world?" She laughed happily, boyishly. "Don't be afraid, ma'am. He's as harmless as a cat. More so. A cat'll scratch."

"Gee glory, Mr. Rogers!" She edged closer to the thing on his hip.

It's a chuckawalla; a big rock of common out here. He never stings—never does any harm. You let it bite? For a while?"

Lorna looked up at Shot's face. He wasn't teasing, she saw, was really proffering a gift, as a bull might.

He stepped forward and held out his hand, taking the beast easily and not to hurt it. It squirmed in the transfer, but she supported it's body and cuddled it close.

"Well, I'll be switched! Well, I'll stammered Shot, proudly. "You're not a bit afraid!"

"You expect me to be?" "Why—why—why, no! But—

Lorna managed a smile.

and the wild monster you brought me!"

Jerry Dale came walking over the rise from the bull pastures then, walked rather slowly and wearing a grin as if in high amusement.

Rogers glanced at him, then back at the girl. She centered her attention on petting and stroking the chuckawalla's rough old hide. Rogers looked quizzically at Jerry as he came up to them.

"So you can't take it, eh?" said Jerry, ignoring Shot.

"Howdy," said Shot, agreeably. "I was just showing Miss Lorna a chuckawalla. She never saw one before."

"Nuts," said Jerry. "Listen, Lorna, you don't want to let off the handle like that. You and I are going to get along, kid! Everything's jake. No hard feelings." He looked directly at Shot Rogers then, for the first time. "Lorna and I were out for a walk together, Rogers. See?"

"Yes! Yes, come on!" said Lorna, hastily. "Let me carry the zoo, Mr. Rogers, and we'll walk a bit before supper." She exhaled as if in sudden relief. Her left arm held the lizard, and with her right she reached to take Shot Rogers's elbow, steering him with them slowly down the hill, pretending deep interest in the lizard.

Shot, badly confused, stalked beside her. He looked over her head at the other young man, but Jerry was scowling at Lorna and at the lizard she held. Shot didn't understand it all. He just sensed that Lorna wanted to stick with him; the determined pressure of her hand on his arm indicated that. The cowboy swallowed hard.

"It—uh—uh—it's right pleasant weather hereabouts," he ventured, profoundly. "What I mean, ma'am, it's good for the stock and all, and it don't do—uh—it doesn't do people any harm to have a cool attitude like this to work in. Gots awful hot down around Blanco and toward Tucson in summer."

"Listen, Lorna," Jerry put in, "you've got—"

But she quickly interrupted. "We've got to get back toward the house for supper. Aunt Sally wouldn't want us to be late. She and Concha were baking some cakes for you boys. All of you men—the men Uncle George hired, they'll be here for supper, too, I imagine?" She ended on a questioning note.

"Listen," Jerry began again, "I—"

"Yes, ma'am," Shot picked up the conversation at once, steering them back toward the porch. "We'll all be here tonight. We got to do some planning. And—to tell you the truth, Miss Lorna, we all sort of wanted to celebrate your coming. We were talking about it this afternoon."

"That's sweet! Especially after—"

"Nuts! Listen, Lorna, I'm not—"

Jerry scowled.

"Not much happens to break up the day-in-and-day-out work on a ranch, ma'am, and when a guest like you comes from the east, why, it's worth a dance!" Shot was doing better now, he felt. Lorna's arm pressure had relaxed.

"Dance! Tonight?" she looked up at Shot.

"Well, no. Matter of fact, we figured you'd be too wore out, after the trouble with Luis Escobar's Mexicans. But if you feel all right by, say Saturday—"

"Wonderful, Mr. Rogers! Where will we have it?"

"Why, right here, George—Mr. Brazee—says. And uh—whilst I'm on that subject—well, ma'am, I was bringing that chuckawalla—I knew it wouldn't be worth keeping as a real pet, so you can just put him down to go on back in the rocks and be happy, and—"

Shot was floundering again. So obviously so that both Lorna and Jerry looked directly at him.

"Yes?" she prompted, curiously.

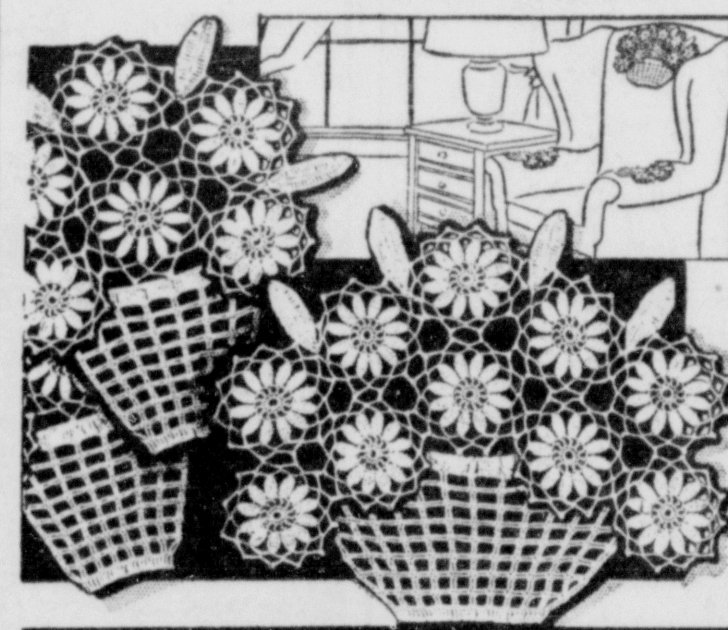

Shot swallowed. He was smart enough to know that an opportunity has to be grabbed, or it may vanish. But he had hoped for some more privacy with her. He and the other cowboy had framed up the dance a few minutes ago and he had set out at once to tell Lorna, also to make his own "arrangements" if possible. He had found a chuckawalla on the way. He had learned on it as an excuse for opening a conversation and working cautiously to his real topic.

He knew if he let Lorna get back to the ranch house some of the other men would be there and would surely ask her what he meant to ask her himself. He couldn't think of any way to be rid of Jerry Dale. Like it or no, he had to plunge on!

"I, uh, I was going to say, I'd be proud to have you say I could sort of be your escort for the dance, ma'am!" There, he had it out!

Lorna brightened instantly, even as she bit her lip in amusement. "Phooey!" growled Jerry. "If there's a dance, it'll be right in her house. She won't need—"

FLOWERS

Mr. Frank Mattingly

Mr. Jacob Hafer

Mr. John Hafer

SINCE EARLY TIMES, when man first learned to honor his departed friends and relatives, flowers have been the symbol of honor and affectionate respect. They remain the most perfect way to express sympathy to bereaved friends.

Our funeral home is equipped to keep floral tributes fresh and lovely for considerable periods. Thus flowers placed in our keeping have lost none of their beauty when they are finally displayed at the funeral service.

Maybe the Bird Just Wanted a Drag

Ithaca, N. Y. (AP)—Firemen blame a sparrow for a fire which broke out in a second-floor sleeping porch at the home of W. S. Wolf.

They said the sparrow apparently picked up a live cigarette butt and carried it home as material for a nest it was building inside a porch partition.

ADVERTISING THAT PRODUCES CROWDS

The value of newspaper advertising has been proved so thoroughly, there is little reason for anyone doubting its superiority as the advertising medium.

No other medium has crowded retail stores like newspapers. No other medium has produced as many direct sales.

Even customers have learned that newspaper advertisements pull. When an ad is especially interesting, Mr. and Mrs. Shopper expect a mob, so shop early.

Why experiment when you know Times-News advertising sells?

NOAH NUMSKULL
I'll show you how I do it!
DEAR NOAH—DO IT! MITE GET INTOXICATED WHEN THEY BORE INTO AN OLD WINE CASK? THE LMA BRETT, NASHVILLE, TENN.
DEAR NOAH—I LIKE MUSIC WHEN I'M FISHING, SO IF I CAST MY LINE ACROSS THE RIVER, WILL THAT BE A BROAD CAST?
WARS, W. SMITH, BOONVILLE, IOWA.
Copyright, 1939, Fred Fisher Music Co., Inc., New York, N.Y.

Why, there goes Edward out toward the garage! And he's carrying that coat with the hole burned in the pocket! ???

How could I have been so stupid? Humph! Well, this will take care of it!

HM?? He's burning the coat in the incinerator! Is he out of his head???

Pardon me, Ma'am, but Detective Tracy's in the front hall. He'd like to see you.

I just dropped out, Mrs. Nuremoh, to ask you one more question. Could you tell me whether or not your husband is left-handed?

Why, he's... I... ER... ER... REALLY, I DON'T KNOW.

Don't you shouldn't have bopped him? He only tried to cut in!

Now you've done it! Don't be so jealous, darling. Chic will bounce you out of his band.

You'll pay for that, my fine-feathered friend!

Not him! He's getting too much free publicity from me being engaged to the world's richest heiress!

I can't stand this being shadowed like a criminal—let's run away—there's no law against two people in love getting married.

I'm wacky about you! But Grandfather says hell punish me, if he ever catches me seeing you again!

Hello! Here's a tip! Tell old Cyrus Borden his grand daughter is out at the blue mill dancing with that musician boy friend!

Truck Driver May Lose Life; Cycle Crashes

Cloudburst Centers Over Cumberland; Sprinkle at Fairgo

A short-lived cloudburst flooded down on Cumberland about 2 p. m. yesterday, accompanied by a heavy wind.

The storm was over in fifteen minutes, but four persons had been injured, one critically, during the blinding downpour.

Reports of minor damage were numerous, although the storm seemed to be localized over Cumberland. Only a slight sprinkle fell at Fairgo during the deluge here.

The man most seriously injured was Frank Brown, 34, a former WPA worker, who was admitted to Allegheny hospital after the truck he was driving turned completely over on Pine avenue.

Victim's Condition Critical

The hospital reported last night that Brown was in a critical condition, with little hope for recovery. He was injured about the back and head.

Hospital attendants said they were told the truck turned over when Brown kicked it out of gear and lost control on a downhill grade.

Floyd Simmons, 16, of 69 Marion street, was admitted to the hospital with an injured left shoulder and arm. Harry Atkinson, 40, of Willowbrook road, was treated at home for an injured left hand and back. Both were riding with Brown.

Motorcyclist Breaks Leg

Charles Bartlett, 35, of Spring Gap, sustained a compound fracture of the left leg when his motorcycle collided with a car on Valley street, near Walnut. Bartlett, employed by the Acme Super Market on Virginia avenue, was admitted to Allegheny hospital.

John Lippold, 243 First street, who was riding with Bartlett, escaped injury.

City police investigated both mishaps. No charges were placed against any of the three drivers.

Street Flooded at Dingle

Traffic was held up for a short time by flood waters at the Dingle traffic circle, tree limbs were blown down in various parts of the city, and the tennis courts at the Country Club were reported badly damaged.

The sun came out shortly after the storm, and the government thermometer on City Hall climbed above 50 during the afternoon. Lighter showers fell during the late evening, accompanied by a display of lightning.

Customers at the circus were given the added thrill of watching the big top weather through the storm. Circus workers afterward admitted they were frightened.

Man Who Fired At Wife Jailed

Was in Hospital After Cutting Self

George R. Ryan was released yesterday from Miners hospital, Frostburg, only to be immediately placed in the county jail to await a hearing on charges of assault with intent to kill.

The 59-year-old Eckhart man had been in the hospital since July 21, when he slashed his throat with a razor after allegedly taking a pot-shot at his estranged wife.

He was arrested yesterday by Sheriff Lucian C. Radcliffe on the warrant sworn out by his wife, Mrs. Miranda L. Ryan, the day of the shooting. When officers went to serve it the first time, Ryan had been removed to the hospital in a critical condition from the self-inflicted razor gashes.

Ryan allegedly fired at his wife as she started out to milk the cows at the home of her son, Russell Ryan. The shot went wild, and Ryan then descended upon her and beat her with the butt of the gun, Mrs. Ryan charged.

Officers said the man apparently went "berserk" when his wife fled suit the previous day for an absolute divorce on grounds of cruelty. In the suit, she charged her husband with being "abusive and oppressive" and claimed that he had driven her from their home numerous times at the point of a shotgun.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled in Magistrates court next Tuesday.

on High Roads Low Roads and By-Ways

We wandered about the Fairgo stables yesterday afternoon, and for no apparent good reason, picked out a horse named Rough Buddy for a picture.

Back in town we asked our friend Mike, who knows something about the horses, whether Rough Buddy was a good horse.

"He better be," says Mike. "I've got him picked for my daily double."

All of which made us think we had some uncanny sense for picking a good horse—until Mike comes to tell us how he happens to pick on this Rough Buddy.

Mike says he told his wife he would pick No. 2 horse in the first for them two and No. 9 horse in the second for their nine children. And Rough Buddy happened to be No. 9.

Maybe Rough Buddy was named with some foresight. While we were sighting the camera a colored lad walks up and says he would like to be in the picture, too. We say all right, and about that time Rough Buddy reaches out and sinks his teeth into the colored lad's right arm. Only the colored lad jumped like a streak of chocolate lightning and all the boss got was a mouthful of shirt sleeve. Which probably was a poor substitute for a shirt.

We encountered Ivan Poling, of the Fort Cumberland, tramping around the barns. We asked if anybody had given him any hot tips. "Aw," he says, "I only talk to the horses. They tell me plenty. And I told them plenty, too."

Here is a sample of Kiwanis humor, supposedly copyrighted by George Buchanan, but we run the risk of being jailed (for stealing it from the weekly Kiwanis letter) or of being lynched (for passing it on to an unsuspecting public):

City Council refused to let the Celanese unionists meet in City Hall square tonight because of a possible stoppage of fire trucks.

The last mass meeting in the square, as well as we can remember, was the not-so-soon-to-be-forgotten occasion of the rotten egg barrage aimed at Brother Dan.

We were standing under an awning during yesterday's terrific downpour when a portly gentleman came bounding up the street and ducked under the same awning.

"Some rain," we remarked.

"Rain, hell," he answered, looking at his soaked white suit. "This ain't rain. Just an ex-cessage of water."

Driver Unhurt As Car Skids into Pole

Police were called about 9:45 o'clock last night to the intersection of Maryland and Central avenues when a car driven by Walter Snowden, colored, of 111 North Mechanic street, crashed into a telephone pole.

Officers investigating the mishap said witnesses to the crash told them the Snowden machine was traveling slow because of the rain. His car skidded as he started to round a curve, they said.

No charges were placed against the uninjured Snowden.

'STOPPAGE OF WORK'— Nearly 1,200 Celanese workers filed claims for state unemployment compensation here yesterday. Girl's Screams Scare Prowler from Bedroom

The nocturnal prowlings of a middle-aged negro who terrorized three West Side families over the weekend were at an end today.

The negro, booked at the city jail as Charles House, is to be given a hearing this morning on charges he feloniously entered two homes and attempted to enter a third early Saturday morning.

Negro Identified

House was arrested by Lieut. James E. Van and Officers D. J. Ray and P. O. Daum about two hours after he had allegedly "visited" the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Orion Wilson, 308 Mountain View Drive; Mrs. Sarah Oliver, 14 North Lee street; and Mrs. Mary S. Wright, 16 North Lee street. He was identified by all parties involved. Lieutenant Van said last night.

The intruder struck first at the Wilson residence. He entered the house by the unlocked kitchen door and made his way upstairs to the room occupied by Miss Louise Wilson, about 23.

Miss Wilson was asleep, but awoke as the man entered the room. Startled but not frightened, she asked him who he was and what he was doing there.

Screams Scare Prowler

The negro gave his name, which she did not remember. She told him to leave and then screamed.

The man fled out the door onto the adjoining porch and jumped to the ground, according to members of the Wilson family. Miss Wilson called police, who responded but were unable to find any trace of the man.

Miss Wilson said the man did not harm her in any way, nor did he threaten her. Nothing was taken from the house.

The man made his next appearance at the home of Mrs. Wright, a widow. Mrs. Wright said she was awakened at about 2:30 a. m. by a noise at her dining room window. She got up to investigate, but saw nothing but a man standing on the porch of Mrs. Oliver next door.

Enters Next Door

She thought nothing of it, she declared, and returned to bed, only to be aroused by police later to identify House. She said the man had evidently attempted to enter through a window but had been unable to pry off the screen, which was nailed fast.

Mr. and Mrs. George Carter, who live upstairs in the Wright house, said they heard nothing.

Mrs. Oliver told a reporter last night that she was awakened about 2:30 a. m. by a "commotion" in the living room. The intruder had up a smoking stand when he crawled through the living room window, which had been left unfastened.

Leaves Unhappily

"I went to the head of the stairs to see. The man had apparently been in the kitchen, but stepped out of the living room just as I got to the head of the stairs.

"He looked up, and I asked him, 'What are you doing here?'"

Mrs. Oliver said the negro, whom she described as well-dressed, turned and sauntered out of the door—"nonchalantly." He was "in no hurry," she said.

Mrs. Oliver then called her 22-

County Denies Court Can Hear Richards Case

Commissioners Say Clerk Was Given Impartial Trial

The board of county commissioners yesterday vigorously challenged the right of its ousted clerk to appeal his dismissal to Circuit court.

The commissioners, through County Attorney Walter C. Capper, contested on two fronts the petition of Ex-Clerk Thomas P. Richards for a writ of mandamus to compel them to reinstate him.

In the first place, the commissioners demurred to the proceedings, describing the petition as "insufficient in law and bad in substance."

Their demurrer argued that the law provides for no review of their decision to discharge Richards for "wilful neglect of duty and misbehavior in office."

Claims Court Can't Step In

Circuit court, therefore, "has no legal right to review" the matter, the demurrer sets forth.

Even if the court does have such a right, it "clearly appears" on the face of Richards's petition that the charges filed against him were sufficiently specific and definite to give him ample opportunity to prepare a defense, according to the demurrer, which asserts, too, that he was given a "fair and impartial trial."

Thus, there is no occasion for judicial review, the commissioners contend.

Taking No Chances

The demurrer further claims that the court has no power to review the commissioners' action in ruling on the testimony offered at the hearing on the charges. It points out at the same time that the testimony was "material, relevant, and proper."

The commissioners were prepared too, for the possibility of their demurrer's being overruled by the court and filed a bulky answer to the petition, as well.

In their answer, the commissioners admit only the strictly factual matters involved, such as Richards's election, induction into office, the formalities of his dismissal, and the like.

Qualification in Question

Even on some of these points, the board declined to commit itself definitely.

Most interesting point brought out in the answer is the board's refusal to admit that Richards's qualification was legal. The board does not deny it, but says it "cannot admit that said qualification was legal."

The answer admits only that Richards accepted the office and "attempted to qualify before the clerk of the Circuit court" and filed the required bond.

Its stand is not amplified in the answer, but it appeared that the question devolved on Richards's possible failure to be sworn by the county commissioners as well as by Circuit Court Clerk Robert Jackson.

Plenty of Swearing Now

Authoritative information was not available yesterday, but it was indicated that the formality of being sworn by the commissioners has been omitted in the past. It was not omitted, however, when R. Mason Hill was named to replace Richards in the wake of "l'affaire Buchholz."

Hill was sworn by both Board President Simeon W. Green and Court Clerk Jackson.

"The public local laws of Allegheny county require the clerk to the board to be sworn by one of the commissioners. Whether other statutes require him to be sworn by the Circuit court clerk, too, remained unknown, but it has been customary for many years."

The remainder of the commissioners' answer is devoted to denying Richards's charges that the

Celanese Union Calls Public Meeting Tonight

Management Makes No Move To Start Negotiations

No progress was made yesterday toward settling the strike has thrown 9,000 Celanese employees out of work.

There were two developments of importance.

One was that contact established between the New York offices of Celanese Corporation and the Bureau of Conciliation in Washington.

According to Charles D. Wagner, general works manager, the bureau was informed that the company "is quite prepared to state position."

Negotiations Not Mentioned

Significance may be attached to the fact that no mention was made of the company's being willing to enter into any sort of over-the-top negotiations.

No progress was made toward negotiations between the company and union here.

Yesterday's second development was the union's announcement to hold a series of mass meetings throughout the county, with the first one here tonight at 7:30.

City Council yesterday granted permission for the mass meeting.

Celanese Strike Causes Acetate Rayon Shortage

The Celanese strike "threatens to turn what was always an uncomfortable shortage of acetate rayon yarn into a serious scarcity that may hamper the operations of many weaving mills," the Daily News Record, New York textile trade paper, said yesterday.

Other sources of acetate rayon cannot supply the demand, the paper says, and other forms of rayon cannot be immediately put to use as a substitute for Celanese is America's largest producer of acetate rayon.

be held on the vacant lot at South and North Centre streets. Permission to hold the meeting in City Hall square was denied on grounds that the crowd might interfere with the movement of trucks.

Leaders to Speak

Charles Ervin, public relations counsel for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and associated editor of that union's newspaper, will speak. So will W. Wayne, vice-president of Textile Worker Union of America who has been here for several years as organizer, and other union leaders.

Similar meetings will be held tomorrow in Frostburg at 2 p. m., Lonaconing at 4 p. m., in Westport at 6 p. m., and in Keyser at 8 p. m. Meetings will be held Thursday in Hyndman at 2 p. m., in Mt. Savage at 4 p. m., in Mt. Land at 6 p. m., and in Eckhart at 8 p. m.

The meetings are open to the public.

John L. Conner, commissioner of conciliation from the U. S. department of labor, talked with William the plant manager, by phone yesterday, but reported no developments.

J. M. Pohlhaus, state commissioner of labor and statistics, arrived in Cumberland yesterday to study the situation and offer his assistance in bringing peace.

Altmeyer Praises Security Amendments

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—Senator Arthur J. Altmeyer of the Social Security Board today described the social security amendments before President Roosevelt for approval as the "most important piece of legislation in this Congress any other that I know of."

"We will now have an old-age survivors' system with over 40,000,000 people," he said. He added there would be benefits for survivors not only of the old people of young workers who have reached the retirement age of 65. He referred to payments to widows and dependent children of elderly workers who die or are incapacitated before becoming 65.

Congress completed action today on a long list of revisions which experts say will bring about 12,000 additional persons under the law and effect taxpayer savings of $1,000,000,000.

As soon as the president signs legislation into law, Altmeyer said the board would have to augment its field staff. The 332 field offices may be increased and what he described as "itinerant adjudicators" may have to be added.

WPA Fishermen Land Big Bass

A party of four Cumberland WPA workers reported a "good catch" on a fishing trip to Big Pool, near Brunswick, Md.

The anglers, including G. R. Gormer, Russell Bible, Bud Keeler, and Adam Frost, bagged twelve bass, ranging from four to six pounds.

Auto Sales Firm In Receivership

W. Md. Motors Inc. Found Insolvent

Western Maryland Motors, Inc., today had been declared insolvent and its affairs placed in the hands of a receiver.

Thomas Lohr Richards was appointed receiver yesterday by Chief Judge D. Lindsey Sloan and posted bond of $3,000.

Appointment of a receiver was asked in a petition filed in Circuit court by Carl Sanders, treasurer, creditor, stockholder, and director of the firm.

Sanders stated in the petition that the automobile sales and service company, with offices at 205 North Mechanic street, was "insolvent and unable to pay its creditors." The bill of complaint said that assets of the company included $3,090.77 in accounts receivable in addition to three 1939 used cars, office and shop equipment, and automobile parts. Liabilities were estimated at more than $5,100.

Stockholders Agree

Stockholders, directors and officers of the company, which was incorporated in March, 1936, have agreed to the appointment of a receiver, according to the bill. The company's answer admitting the allegation and assenting to appointment of a receiver, was filed by James P. Barrett, president, and Thomas Lohr Richards, secretary. Judge Sloan signed an order restraining the Phil Smith garage and Thorne Smith, its agent, from proceeding with the execution of a rent distraint, granting the landlord, however, the right to move for dissolution of the order. The motor company owes $300 rent, according to the Sander petition.

Judge Sloan, in his order, also gave the receiver authority to continue to operate the business on a cash basis up to Sept. 1.

Visitor Jailed For 101 Days

Nabbed by Troopers For Drunk Driving

Unable to pay $101 in fines for drunken and reckless driving, Alfred Shroust, 35, of near Johnstown, Pa., was sentenced yesterday in Trial Magistrate's court to 101 days in the county jail.

Shroust was arrested Sunday on the McCullen highway, near Cresaptown, by State Troopers George J. Miller and T. A. Short after they noticed his car weaving on the road.

Another driver, John Bunting, 16, of Christy road, was fined $10 and costs for operating a motor vehicle without a license.

In police court, Harry J. Pressman, of Frostburg, and Donald J. Harvey of Valley road, each forfeited $5 bond for driving through white traffic signals on Baltimore street.

Edrington Discharged By Harry C. Jones

Baltimore, Aug. 7. (AP)—William G. Edrington, a detective sergeant of the state police suspended July 7, was discharged today by State Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones.

Edrington, a merit system employee 16 years, was charged with "inefficiency neglect of performance of duty, drinking while on duty and making a false statement to his commanding officer."

The charges, made in connection with Edrington's special assignment to patrol the new Philadelphia road from July 1 to 4, were brought by Col. Beverly Ober, police superintendent. Jones said only the charges of drinking while on duty and making a false statement to his commanding officer were sustained by the evidence.

Only the colored lad jumped like a streak of chocolate lightning and all the boss got was a mouthful of shirt sleeve. Which probably was a poor substitute for a shirt.

We encountered Ivan Poling, of the Fort Cumberland, tramp-ing around the barns. We asked if anybody had given him any hot tips. "Aw," he says, "I only talk to the horses. They tell me plenty. And I told them plenty, too."

Here is a sample of Kiwanis humor, supposedly copyrighted by George Buchanan, but we run the risk of being jailed (for stealing it from the weekly Kiwanis letter) or of being lynched (for passing it on to an unassuming public):

"I bought a wooden whistle, but it wooden whistle, So I bought a steel whistle, But steel it wooden whistle, So I bought a lead whistle, Steel they wooden lead me whistle, So I bought a tin whistle, and now I tin whistle."

City Council refused to let the Celanese unionists meet in City Hall square tonight because of a possible stoppage of fire trucks.

The last mass meeting in the square, as well as we can remember, was the not-so-soon-to-be-forgotten occasion of the rotten egg barrage aimed at Brother Dan.

We were standing under an awning during yesterday's terrific downpour when a portly gentleman came bounding up the street and ducked under the same awning.

"Some rain," we remarked. "Rain, hell," he answered, looking at his soaked white suit. "This ain't rain. Just an excessage of water."

Driver Unhurt As Car Skids into Pole

Police were called about 9:45 o'clock last night to the intersection of Maryland and Central avenues when a car driven by Walter Snowden, colored, of 111 North Mechanic street, crashed into a telephone pole.

Officers investigating the mishap said witnesses to the crash told them the Snowden machine was traveling slow because of the rain. His car skidded as he started to round a curve, they said.

No charges were placed against the uninjured Snowden.

Girl's Screams Scare Prowler from Bedroom

The nocturnal prowling of a middle-aged negro who terrorized three West Side families over the week-end were at an end today.

The negro, booked at the city jail as Charles House, is to be given a hearing this morning on charges he feloniously entered two homes and attempted to enter a third early Saturday morning.

Negro Identified

House was arrested by Ident. James E. Van and Officers D. J. Racy and P. O. Daum about two hours after he had allegedly "visited" the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Orion Wilson, 308 Mountain View Drive; Mrs. Sarah Oliver, 14 North Lee street; and Mrs. Mary S. Wright, 16 North Lee street. He was identified by all parties involved. Lieutenant Van said last night.

The intruder struck first at the Wilson residence. He entered the house by the unlocked kitchen door and made his way upstairs to the room occupied by Miss Louise Wilson, about 23.

Miss Wilson was asleep, but awoke as the man entered the room. Startled but not frightened, she asked him who he was and what he was doing there.

Screams Scare Prowler

The negro gave his name, which she did not remember. She told him to leave and then screamed.

The man fled out the door onto the adjoining porch and jumped to the ground, according to members of the Wilson family. Miss Wilson called police, who responded but were unable to find any trace of the man.

Miss Wilson said the man did not harm her in any way, nor did he threaten her. Nothing was taken from the house.

The man made his next appearance at the home of Mrs. Wright, a widow. Mrs. Wright said she was awakened at about 2:30 a. m. by a noise at her dining room window. She got up to investigate, but saw nothing but a man standing on the porch of Mrs. Oliver next door.

Enters Next Door

She thought nothing of it, she declared, and returned to bed, only to be aroused by police later to identify House. She said the man had evidently attempted to enter through a window but had been unable to pry off the screen, which was nailed fast.

Mr. and Mrs. George Carter, who live upstairs in the Wright house, said they heard nothing.

Mrs. Oliver told a reporter last night that she was awakened about 2:30 a. m. by a "commotion" in the living room. The intruder had upset a smoking stand when he crawled through the living room window, which had been left unfastened.

"At first, I thought it was my father moving around down there," Mrs. Oliver said.

Leaves Unhappily

"I went to the head of the stairs to see. The man had apparently been in the kitchen, but stepped out of the living room just as I got to the head of the stairs."

"He looked up and I asked him, 'What are you doing here?'" Mrs. Oliver said the negro, whom she described as well-dressed, turned and sauntered out of the door—"nonchalantly." He was "in no hurry," she said.

Mrs. Oliver then called her 22-year-old daughter, Leona, and asked her to telephone police. Also in the house was Mrs. Oliver's 77-year-old father, Jacob Whitacre, who slept through the excitement.

Celanese Union Calls Public Meeting Tonight

Management Makes No Move To Start Negotiations

No progress was made yesterday toward settling the strike which has thrown 9,000 Celanese employees out of work.

There were two developments of importance.

One was that contact established between the New York offices of Celanese Corporation and the Bureau of Conciliation in Washington.

According to Charles D. Wall, general works manager, the bureau was informed that the company "is quite prepared to state position."

Negotiations Not Mentioned

Significance may be attached to the fact that no mention was made of the company's being willing to enter into any sort of over-the-negotiations.

No progress was made in negotiations between the company and union here.

Yesterday's second development was the union's announcement to hold a series of mass meetings throughout the county, with the first one here tonight at 7:30.

City Council yesterday gave permission for the mass meeting.

The Celanese strike "threatens to turn what was always an uncomfortable shortage of acetate rayon yarn into a serious scarcity that may hamper the operations of many weaving mills," the Daily News Record, New York textile trade paper, said yesterday.

Other sources of acetate yarn cannot supply the demand, the paper says, and other forms of rayon cannot be immediately put to use as a substitute for Celanese is America's largest producer of acetate rayon.

Altmeyer Praises Security Amendments

Washington, Aug. 7. (AP)—Charles Arthur J. Altmeyer of the Social Security Board today described the social security amendments before President Roosevelt for approval as the "most important piece of legislation in this Congress any other that I know of."

"We will now have an old-age survivors' system with over 45,000 people," he said. He added there would be benefits for survivors not only of the old people of young workers who have reached the retirement age of 65. He referred to payments to widows and dependent children of old workers who die or are incapacitated before becoming 65.

Congress completed action today on a long list of revisions which experts say, will bring about 15,000 additional persons under the act and effect taxpayer savings of $1,000,000,000.

As soon as the president signs legislation into law, Altmeyer said the board would have to augment its field staff. The 332 field offices may be increased and what he described as "litterant and inadequate" may have to be added.
